

HARDSHIPS MARKED PIONEER BURIAL RITE

Dr. W. A. Galloway, Gives Another Interesting Pioneer Story From His Files Of Unpublished Early Ohio Narratives.

Dr. W. A. Galloway, Xenia, chairman of the historical committee of the Greene County Home-Coming who is arranging an interesting exhibit, is in possession of an original manuscript that tells of the hardships involved in a pioneer funeral, and is part of the literature that enables modern Xenians to picture the conditions under which lived the pioneers who made this city possible.

This story of a pioneer funeral, in the vicinity of Old Chillicothe one hundred years ago, was found among the valuable historical notes of the late Dr. C. M. Galloway.

The pioneer's last service for those he loved was surrounded with limitations and hardships difficult for us to realize in the light of the luxuries of the modern burial service. There were no coffin factories in those days. The carpenter or cabinet maker came for the measurements of the deceased, and built his coffin, according to his size, from strong and selected oak lumber. The deceased was dressed in "his fine suit of clothes", often including white lace-trimmed gloves, and reverently placed in this unlined box. The coffin handles were individual ones. The plain board lid was fastened in place with long screws. One has difficulty, now, in visualizing the family's task of preparing enough food for the large concourse of people—and their horses—that came to the funeral of any prominent citizen.

The deceased of this story was John Townsley, builder of the first log school house in Greene County, Ohio, in 1805. He was a teacher in the school house that he built. The story which follows is unique. The hour of death and the date of the funeral service of the dead pioneer was heralded about the newly settled country among the sturdy settlers who lived in log houses. They traveled over trails and wagon tracks cut out of the virgin forest by men and boys of the period.

A large assemblage, representing a wide range of surrounding country, came at the appointed time to the late home of the deceased. They came on foot, on horse-back and in wagons to pay sincere respect to the deceased, and to comfort the afflicted members of the family.

The following is an account of one pioneer funeral, as given me by my Uncle Robert Kendall, who, as a boy, accompanied his father, who was my grandfather, William Kendall, to this funeral.

It happened in early springtime. There had been a cold rain and sleet for several days. The earth was soaked with water, and the streams were bank full. They mounted their horses in early morning, and rode through the woods until they reached their destination—two miles above Cedarville—nine miles from their home. The mud in places, was one-half knee deep to their horses, and they were wet through and chilled to the bone when they arrived.

There was a long service at the house, and a substantial pioneer lunch was served for all in attendance. Afterwards, the four-horse conestoga wagon with cover was brought out to carry the coffin and the members of the family to the graveyard, nine miles distant.

The wagon also carried axes to cut out fallen trees and limbs that might obstruct the way; a mattock, spades and shovels for digging the grave. Following this wagon, were other covered conestoga four-horse wagons filled with people; the horsemen came after the wagons.

Thus, in the cold rain, the sad procession wended its tedious way to "God's Acre", there to perform its last duty to a citizen, a neighbor, a friend, and a relative.

It was late in the afternoon, after riding through mud one-half wheel deep, and fording Mesquite creek that ran into the wagon beds, that they, at length, reached the Stevenson graveyard.

The horsemen dismounted, and forming relays, soon finished digging the grave. The body was quickly lowered by straps. A few appropriate remarks were addressed to the mourners and their friends by the preacher, and after the singing of the twenty-third Psalm and a short prayer, the newly made grave was quickly filled, the wagons quietly faced homeward, retracing their weary way, and the horsemen spurring onward, disappeared in the forest trails.

In this pioneer graveyard of four acres, rest the remains of John Townsley and eight other soldiers of The American Revolution, twenty-four soldiers of the War of 1812; the noted Scotch associate minister, Rev. Robert Armstrong, and many of the pioneer families who first settled central Greene County, following the Treaty of Greenville, in 1795.

The funeral luxury of today, is in striking contrast with the last rites, performed by family, friends and the cabinet maker, for our pioneer ancestors in Greene County.

John Townsley was a notable man in his day. We hope to learn more of his valuable community services, from an exhibit of some of his work, at the Home-Coming historical display. He was a man of wealth, as wealth was counted in those early days; but above all, he was a generous man, with the public good continuously at heart.

Fortunately a record of this funeral has been preserved in good descriptive detail. It is both unusual and unique, in that it is one of the very few pioneer funeral stories to be found in American historical literature.

A Greene County historical society finds ample argument for existence, in many pioneer stories and traditions as yet unrecorded—stories that touch the early and intimate daily life of our county's sturdy first settlers and the redmen who preceded them.

TEN ACRES OF BLACKBERRIES

Berries are big, cultivated, coreless, juicy, tempting, sugary morsels. Perfect dessert, jam, pie and canning berries. Customers said, "My, one and one half bushel lost only one quart in canning. Delicious jam. Kept part of berries five days before finished canning and last just as nice as first canned. Why, wild berries begin to break down and juice run out and fill with sour germs as soon as picked and your cultivated berries hardly stain the container, yet are so tender and sweet. I see now why so many of my wild berries canned, pop up. Your cultivated berries reheated slightly when can is opened with a slight sprinkling of sugar added, have that fresh from the patch flavor so pleasing and attractive to the taste. Did not know that there was so much difference between wild and your cultivated blackberries. Will never put up another wild berry."

If you do not know the superior qualities and real economy in canning cultivated blackberries order through your Xenia grocer at least one half of your 1923 supply. WOODMANSEE'S BLACKBERRIES, and be convinced. 24 quart crate $4.32—bushel 32 quarts $5.76. Prices uniform all season. Deliveries in and after week of July 23.

Get circular of and order through the following Xenia groceries: Howland, Orient Hill, Arment, Gordin & Gordin, Bull, Kearney Bros., Burtis Grocery Co., Hyman Stores, Xenia Fruit Co., Ross, Liberty Market, Frank Fletcher and Fetz Bros.

GLIMPSES OF OHIO HISTORY

MANY historians claim that, but for the services of George Rogers Clark during the Revolutionary War, the Northwestern territory would have passed to England or to Spain.

He Wrested Ohio From Savage Hands

Of all the expeditions against the Indians during the formative days of Ohio and the Northwest Territory none was more decisive in its ultimate influence upon the country's history than that of George Rogers Clark. Like his famous contemporaries, Boone and Kenton, he was a Kentuckian. During the Revolutionary War he commanded a successful expedition against British strongholds and then turned his energies against the Indians of the Great and Little Miami River Valleys, whose enmity had been inspired against the Americans by the British.

He destroyed many Indian Villages including that of Piqua on the banks of the Mad River five miles from the present site of Springfield.

The backbone of Indian aggression was thus broken, and on the site of the Village of Piqua in the county that bears his name a monument stands to the memory of George Rogers Clark.

They're Only Hollywood Extras, But They Play Royal Roles

No, you're wrong! The three aristocratic personages above weren't born to the royal purple—they attained it as extras in the movies. They are R. C. Pennell, who doubles in celluloid for His Majesty King George of England;

NEW YORK.—Here are three celebrities of whom you probably have never heard. They have the features, the characteristics and even the mannerisms of old world royalty; yet they are only extras in life—without kingdoms or great wealth.

Miss Margaret Mann, who is always sent for when a director wishes to portray the late Queen Victoria, and Vaselli Pash, who resembles the late Czar Nicholas of Russia so closely as to amaze hundreds of exiled nobility.

He isn't acting his kingly role he usually is cast as a physician or professor. Britons all over the world write to him, remarking on his amazing resemblance to King George.

The third picture is that of Vaselli Pash and he, too, was an "unknown" until a casting director selected him to enact the role of the late Czar Nicholas in a recent Russian play. He was a sensation, hundreds of former subjects of the Czar gathering on the set to watch his inspired playing of the last of the Romanoffs.

FRED STONE IS PLANE VICTIM

NEW LONDON, Conn., Aug. 3.—Fred Stone, noted actor, was hurt today when an airplane in which he was flying went into a tail spin while one hundred feet above ground, and crashed. Stone's daughter, Dorothy, witnessed the accident. Stone was taken to a hospital here for treatment.

Stone was taking a solo flight from the new state aviation field at Groton, opposite this city when the accident occurred. Stone had been aloft a short time and was returning when suddenly his motor went dead and the machine slipped down.

The accident occurred over a farm lot beyond the landing field and the machine went into that lot instead of into the regular field.

Attendants at the hospital had not determined early this afternoon, the extent of Stone's injuries. It was understood, however, that both legs were broken and that he received head injuries besides.

READ ETTA KETT DO YOU?

She's The Prophet Of The "Rampant Age" And Here's Her Creator.

PAUL ROBINSON

Say girls, have you seen Etta Kett today? If not, you're denying yourself. Unless you read Etta every day on THE GAZETTE page of comics, you are missing step with all the things that make for snap and verve in the coming generation.

Etta is the supreme exponent of that condition known as "class." She is a prophet of the younger generation, a Joan of Arc of the independent young person who succeeded the flapper.

She speaks a new language—the language of America's youth. And the way she plays with men—say, any girl can take lessons. Etta is a champion of youth also, because she proves that the modern girl can take care of herself in any emergency.

The old-fashioned young woman who sat at home with her "sampler," waited for the men to court her, blushed shyly when love or romance were mentioned, is still sitting safely at home. The girls of the new generation have adopted the same slogan as the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. They "get their man"—and how.

Everyone of the youngsters knows that Etta Kett could give Cleopatra cards and spades and collect more men in a week than Cleo could in a year. And she wouldn't have to poison 'em, either. Furthermore they'd all be good, too, and she'd throw the small fry back in the stream.

But older folks like Etta Kett also. She helps to keep them young, she helps them understand this 1928 youth, and she teaches them tricks about handling their own offspring.

If you're not reading Etta Kett everyday you're going to write Paul Robinson about you. Paul is Central Press artist who conceived Etta, put her down in black and white and thus preserved her for posterity. Paul is no back-number himself. Look at that wavy

CEDARVILLE GETS $10,000 BEQUEST

A bequest of $10,000 to Cedarville College, by the will of Mrs. Harriet L. Ritchie, New York, was announced in news dispatches from that city Friday.

Dr. W. R. McChesney, president of the college, has received no notification of the bequest, other than that issuing from news associations.

Mrs. Ritchie died June 9 and willed that the Greene County college receive the residue of her estate and it is believed the bequest will amount to more than $10,000.

Mrs. Ritchie has never visited Cedarville College but became interested in the school when she belonged to the Reformed Presbyterian Church in New York.

BETTMAN ATTENDS FAIR ON THURSDAY

Gilbert Bettman, Republican candidate for attorney-general of Ohio, was a visitor at the Greene County Fair Thursday afternoon, but made no speech, merely circulating through the crowd and meeting political friends.

Charles V. Truax, state director of agriculture and Martin Davey, candidates for the Democratic nomination for governor, failed to make their scheduled appearance at the fair Thursday and Bettman was the only candidate in attendance.

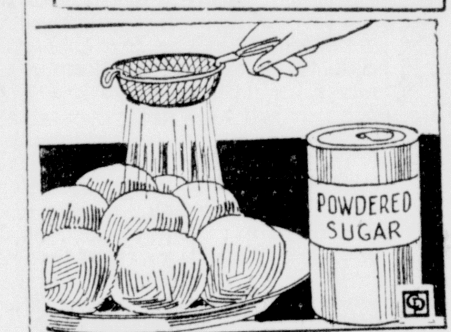

DR. MARSHALL BEST IS HOME PHYSICIAN

Appointment of Dr. Marshall Best, Xenia, as regular physician of the Greene County Children's Home, by the Home board of trustees, was made Wednesday. It was disclosed Friday.

Dr. Best is the first regular physician for the home in several years. Dr. A. D. DeHaven has been acting as temporary physician for the institution.

Dr. Best's appointment became effective August 1. He will pay a visit to the home at least once a week.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE FAILURE—He that hath no rule over his own spirit is like a city that is brown down, and without walls.—Prov. 25:28.

SENSIBLE ACTS AND ANSWERS

Lindbergh can do much besides fly. Just recently he did something which seems almost as significant as flying alone from New York to Paris.

Asked for a statement about his feelings when his friend, Carranza, was killed in a flight, Lindbergh said something to this effect:

"Please permit me to keep my feelings to myself."

Say what you will, Lindbergh has something besides the inborn sense of direction which enables him to fly through the dark without technical navigation knowledge. After he flew to Paris and put his wheels right down in the spot he started for, and flew to Mexico and Central America and the West Indies and back, the United States government assigned an expert to teach him navigation, you know. He probably learned little from the expert. But he can lose all the navigators in the world, just flying straight to his objective, without guiding beams or light of sun, moon or stars.

Whenever anybody of consequence dies or there is an earthquake or a tornado or a great national disaster, persons of prominence issue statements, saying they are sorry, grief-stricken, or even shocked.

Lindbergh says, "Please let me keep my feelings to myself."

So here is a young man who dares to tell the world that his personal feelings are none of the world's business. Lindbergh is just beginning to demonstrate his real greatness. Some day he will surprise this peculiar world again.

There are feelings and sentiments and affairs which are properly private, and Lindbergh is the first American notable, so far, who has had the courage coupled with good taste, to say so.

NOISE AND NERVES

Abolition of unnecessary noises is the formidable task taken upon itself by a special committee of the American society of Engineers. The committee will find out just what noises are preventable, what measures to minimize them can be taken and what injurious effect, if any, the noises of this modern bedlam may have upon humanity.

For human beings the tolerance of noise is largely a matter of adaptation. Repetition so accustoms the mind and ear to the rattle and roar of civilization that the individual soon becomes oblivious of their presence. But this acquired unconsciousness does not necessarily mean that health does not suffer or that there is no wear and tear on the nervous system.

Perhaps within a few years municipalities will have noise inspectors, just as they already have smoke inspectors. One lends itself to control no less than the other. There is no community, however small, in which unnecessary noises can not be found, but the larger the city the greater the nuisance and the more room for noise abatement.

It has been suggested that in addition to the many other "weeks" that are supposed to be observed we might add "noiseless week." If this idea is adopted the week on which the Fourth of July comes might be the one selected.

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

RADIO CLUES

London police catch a man believed to be a Chicago criminal. To avoid detaining him unnecessarily they sent his finger prints to United States by wireless. The police department which receives the wireless can reconstruct the prints speedily from the index letters and figures which are transmitted. Each letter or figure describe a whorl, circle or loop.

This is a clever contribution to justice. If the suspect is innocent, his period of detention will not be stretched out uselessly. And if guilty he will be returned to face his accusers promptly.

BLUE SHIRTS

The medical student is expected to wear a white shirt. It is one of the trademarks. A blue shirt won't do. Of course these artificial restrictions will be discarded eventually. A Van Dyke beard and a white shirt won't add to a doctor's ability. Robert Millikan, cosmic ray scientists and honored by many nations, knows that standardized appearance is absurd. He dresses more like an interesting business man or banker than the college professor of tradition. In action, too, he is a mild insurgent. He believes in being friendly with his students. What a relief from the minor intellects who put on airs to impress folk!

VIENNESE POSTGRADUATES

It is startling to learn that surgeons from this country who go to Vienna for their post-graduate training can attend classes taught in English. We don't make it quite so easy for the European who comes here to absorb the commercial methods in which we excel. But though the Viennese smooth the linguistic path for the American visitor, they don't want him to try to earn his way, even in part, through their universities. In Vienna, alone, nearly 250,000 Austrians are out of work.

OUT OF TUNE?

Dr. Robert Bruce Raup, lecturing in California, says the average individual is out of tune with his environments when he gets angry and "flies off the handle." What's left to be said? Nothing much, unless you remark that some environments are sufficient cause for an effective explosion of temper.

COTTON WOMEN

New styles in cotton fabrics are being created by women. Who could do it better? American manufacturers do well to let the style and color developments in new fabrics come from the feminine side of the house.

The Diary of a New Yorker

By CLARK KINNAIRD

NEW YORK. A manufacturer, who is worth $12,000,000, went into a bank and tried to get a check on another bank in the city, for $100, cashed. He had left his purse in his office and needed the funds for some shopping. The teller would not cash the check without identification, and no one in the bank ever had heard of the millionaire. In confusion, the wealthy man retired.

Mere wealth doesn't make one well known in New York. Gilda Gray, a former entertainer in a saloon, whose claim to fame is her mode and manner of shaking her hips, is mobbed by the curious whenever she appears in public, but J. P. Morgan can walk for blocks on Fifth avenue without being recognized; and few persons are even familiar with the name of George Baker, great banker, who is rated as the third richest man in the United States.

Coffee is 75 cents a cup in one tony New York restaurant. But the "java" doesn't taste any different from that you get at the Automat.

The best coffee to be found anywhere in New York is in all-night cafes patronized by taxi drivers. Traveling bars no longer are a novelty. The man who first thought of transporting a marogay counter, brass foot rail, mirrors, nude paintings, shining tumblers and fat bartender with hair parted in the middle, to parties in wealthy homes, got rich out of the idea, and was booked weeks ahead. Now he has so many competitors in the business that he works no more than a day a week, and is thinking of disposing of his equipment.

The suit of a New York store against a business man of $1,094 for clothing purchased by Peggy Hopkins Joyce after the business man told the store to give Miss Joyce "the things she wants and charge them to me," reminds one that a Broadway gold digger told me that men are more liberal with jewelry and such than they are with money. The presents she is able to cajole out of them almost never includes cash, so she has to hock or sell to a second-hand dealer almost every present she gets.

In the above mentioned suit, the items obtained by Peggy Joyce upon her boy friend's credit are listed as: Eight suits, at $33 to $79 each; 41 pairs of hose at from $2 to $15 each; three raincoats, $15 to $30 each; three coats at $120, $135 and $160, and four handkerchiefs at $4.50 each.

The proprietor of ballroom in a less refined section puts on a party for 100 guests, with hula-hula dancers and other entertainers, cocktails, alleged champagne, whiskeys, cordials, orchestra, and supper served at tables, for $5,000. He gets lots of business because of the "slum" atmosphere and also because owners of beautiful homes no longer risk injury to them from tipsy guests.

Nothing has any permanence in New York. Once Riverside drive was synonymous with wealth. Now it is one of the streets upon which apartments are most reasonably priced. It has passed as a boulevard of luxury, as Madison avenue and Central park west did before it, and as Fifth avenue is passing now.

Deems Taylor says it'll be another year or two before his new opera is ready for presentation. Meanwhile the composer of the successful American opera, "The King of the Hens," is trying to learn a little more about playing the piano. For he cannot play the piano score of his own music, and his attempts are bad. But he can read a score and he can write one.

Irving Berlin, most successful composer of popular tunes, can't read music. He picks out his themes on the piano on two fingers or he hums them to a transcriber who takes them down and makes a piano arrangement.

Americans are pictured by foreigners as putting speed before everything else. But in New York stores escalators are favored over faster elevators. All of the larger stores are having to install more of the moving stairways.

Spanish Scrambled Eggs
Buttered String Beans
Potatoes Browned in Butter
Pineapple Salad
Cookies or Graham Crackers
Tea

I am imagining an unexpected guest dropping in about the middle of the morning and staying to luncheon. What can we have to eat? Well, we always keep plenty of fresh eggs in the house at this time of the year, and we have a few cans of things on our emergency shelf—tomato soup and such. We also have onions. That makes our main dish, scrambled eggs in Spanish style. Maybe a can of pineapple is also on our shelf, which, with a few fresh berries, left from a previous meal, for garnish, makes the salad which is also the dessert. The beans may be canned, but are preferably fresh.

Today's Recipes

Spanish Scrambled Eggs—Mince a tablespoonful of onion and saute in olive oil until tender, add a cup of tomato puree and heat to the bubbling point, add six eggs and scramble all together, season with salt, pepper and paprika.

THE FIRST CALLER

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

The Early Manufacture of Cosmetics

The first real manufacturers of creams and lotions for milady's toilet were the apothecaries of old. This was well into the medieval era when, with every bit of fact a goodly portion of superstition and witchcraft was well mixed, and the whole blended into a ridiculous and impossible result. In one of my most treasured little books, written by a "lady of the seventeenth century," I find constant allusions to the fact that herbs and flowers will prove valueless unless picked under the waning light of an August moon!

And this is but the least of the fallacies and follies which distinguished the old world beauty. In time chemist shops, these old-time quacks grew rich on the profits of their labors. The ladies of the Middle Ages were purported to preserve their dark and glowing beauty. In France trade was excellent. In the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, there were veritable orgies of extravagance. And strange to say, many of the concoctions were successful!

So much so, that in the early part of the seventeenth century Parliament passed an act warning the ladies of England that if they "inveigled" men into marriage through the wicked use of cosmetics, high heels, carmine, etc., the marriage would promptly be voted null and void. Of course, manufacture developed. The creams that were once boiled and blended in a tiny "chamber" are now developed in a sanitary vat, in quantities to fill not one jar or a dozen, but thousands at a time.

In my own factory, I have often six or seven girls working busily to prepare the ingredients for a single blend of cream or lotion. That the progress of manufacture during those early middle ages was not so rapid as it should have been was due solely to the gullibility of the populace. Men chose to believe that beauty was magic—either good or evil, as their individual fancies dictated. That age could be stayed and a lovely skin preserved against the inroads of time without the aid of conjuring tricks, was something not even the moderately intelligent person believed. And the shrewd apothecaries, sensible and secure in their own knowledge, played upon the gullibility of the people to their ultimate gain—for the more of the black art a jar of cream contained, the more potent its power, and the higher its cost.

Then the dark age passed, and chemistry dropped the dark cloak of superstition from its shoulders and stood forth as the exact science, the results of which lead us straight to the doors of modern beauty science.

Squints (Strabismus)

C. Squinting or cross-eye (technical name strabismus) is caused by different things; among them paralysis of the nerve in certain of the eye muscles for some reason, such as from some inflammation in the brain, or some trouble in the nerves along their course, from acute poisoning and injuries, acute rheumatism and other infectious diseases, occasionally golfer, and even auto-intoxication may cause it. Occasionally there are structural defects of the muscles which one is born with—congenital cross-eye, in other words. There may also be a paralysis of the eye muscles due to a reflex irritation, so it is possible that the trouble with your teeth may be a cause in your case, C. However, you should see an oculist immediately to determine the cause, before you can expect any relief.

SUGGESTIONS

The Housewife Hints

"I had slipped so many times getting up and down on the step-ladder, that I decided to put rubber treads on each step. This not only makes you feel safe, but you are sure of never slipping."

"I use a 10-cent coffee pot to warm the baby's bottle, and have no fear of the bottle upsetting."

GRAPE SHERBET

(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe.)
To one cup of grape juice add the juice of one orange and a half a lemon. Add sufficient sugar to sweeten well. To a quart of rich milk add one-half cup sugar and freeze as ice cream. When about half frozen add fruit mixture and finish freezing. Garnish with whipped cream. This makes enough to serve 10 or 12.

Kellygrams

By FRED C. KELLY

A famous publisher has long made it a practice to have his desk and chair on a platform slightly higher than the rest of the room. When anybody comes to him for a business conference the visitor is obliged to look UP to him. His theory is that one cannot easily outwit or browbeat a man mounted on a pedestal. The idea is one that has been used for years by school teachers.

Peter's Adventure

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

Into the Black Bag

"Poor Mrs. Elegant Tinamou! Her troubles were all over now. What a shame she had never learned to go straight! If she had, she need not have lain there on the ground, wounded! What a good looking bird Mrs. Tinamou was! How her poor mate would miss her! How sad that the eggs she had laid would never hatch because no longer would a loving mother hover over them, keep them warm, protect them from danger!"

"As we Bobolinks were mourning over Mrs. Tinamou we heard a sound. Looking up quickly we spied the man on his back. He was coming our way. Unlucky Mrs. Tinamou had warned us not to be caught by her side lest something dreadful happen to us. But curiosity was almost as strong as fear. What was the man going to do? What was he coming back for? We determined not to fly out of sight until we found out, but we had no notion to stay within his arm's reach. So up into the air we rose and hovered high over the head of the human on horseback.

"Can you guess what that man did? No? Well, he picked up poor Mrs. Tinamou and opened a big black bag that hung on his saddle. The next thing he may be established by beginning to take them in very small portions, say less than a teaspoonful and gradually increasing the size of the portion day by day.

Miss S.—A good formula for remedying excessive perspiration and bad odor of the feet is one ounce of formalin to the quart of water. Put a little of the solution on after first washing and drying. Do this every day for a week, then twice a week.

A 25 per cent solution of aluminum chloride is especially good for under the arms. This is applied the same way as the formalin.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—A political orator, in these days of radio broadcasting, in one respect is at a big advantage over the orator of yore, whose range, per speech, was limited to a roomful.

Now he addresses millions in the same length of time that it used to take his predecessor to address hundreds.

However, the up-to-date spell-binder has to have a lot more speeches.

The old-timer could deliver one good one and keep on delivering it over and over again. It made no difference to the Podunk electorate that the good folk of Four Corners had heard the same thing the night before and the voters at Hickville were equally thrilled by the same line of eloquence 24 hours later.

Today a speech once spoken has been listened to by everybody, and an entirely new article is demanded.

When a candidate of this present year of grace announces his purpose to limit himself to a dozen or fifteen speeches during his campaign, at first thought it seems as if he meant to be rather too economical with them.

Why, shucks! that is 12 or 15 times as many as a candidate of two decades ago considered necessary.

The latter merely repeated his. Twelve or 15 is an extraordinary number. On due reflection it is hard to see how one man can think up so many. The better part of an unabridged dictionary can be talked into 12 or 15 speeches.

By good rights each speech in a campaign of today ought to deal with a distinct issue.

There are not that many national issues of importance. Prosperity, economy, agriculture, power, prohibition, corruption, foreign affairs, national defense and the list about exhausts since the parties are practically at one on the tariff and immigration is no recognized.

There would not be that many if the rival candidates had provided some issues of their own. The farmers of the two platforms tried to avoid furnishing any.

Turning out 15 peppy separate speeches between now and November is enough to strain any candidate's imagination.

Authorities also are all agreed that a speech must mean a great deal more to hold a radio audience than was required to make a hit in the 1890's and earlier.

A crowd creates its own enthusiasm.

What the speaker of yesterday had to say did not particularly matter, provided he made the eagle scream and the wings rattle and the chandeliers vibrate. People thought it was great stuff because a lot of them were gathered together, and they hypnotized one another.

Nobody has any idea that as such action is obtainable from a householder who sits calmly down in his own parlor to listen, with only the wife and youngster or two anywhere in the immediate vicinity.

Managers say a candidate certainly is saved a good deal in the way of physical wear and tear through escape from the endless racing machine around the country, should his head off every whistling post.

They are not so sure this is largely offset by the additional demands made on his gray matter.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

AFRAID SHE'LL LOSE HIM

The way some girls write in and ask really plead for advice on how to get their boy friends back, or how to keep them, although they are not worth keeping, you would think that boy friends are the most precious things in the world and that if you lose one you would never get another. Generally speaking, the least attractive girls have more than one boy friend in their lives, and one can get along without one, you know, and still have lots of fun. Of course I admit that they are desirable, and most girls want to get married some time, but usually the way to lose them is to hold on too tight, and a display of independence by now and then is required by the best of men. Try it, girls.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I have a new friend whom I admire very much, but when I am with him he insists on petting which I do not care for. When I do not do what he insists on doing he gets 'peevish' and Mrs. Lee, I do not want to give him up, so can't you tell me how to break his habit but still hold his love?"

"MARGARET—Your body is your own. Margaret, and if you don't want to be mauled by every Tom, Dick and Harry, you have a perfect right to say so. And if the young man feels he can't enjoy your company without saying 'mauling' to him, go, say I. There are a lot more young men who can have good time with a jolly girl who respects her feelings in this matter."

"My Dear Mrs. Lee: I have read your advice and find it very interesting, and now I am asking for some also. I am 17. I have been going out with a young man, aged 23, for a year and nine months steady, and he told me more than once that he really loved me. He had a sweetheart, but she was out of the country, and he was continuously called him up. She knew that we were going to get together. He made a date with her to see her at her girl friend's house, and the same evening he made the date with her in front of me. We had an argument about her and he told me I shouldn't be narrow minded. That he only wanted to see her once, before she went back. Now, here's my point, dear Mrs. Lee: Does he really love me or does he still care for her? Should I let him go and go with others myself? WORRIED FRANCES"

Why not be broadminded, Frances, and make no objection to his seeing his former friend? You see she may have the right to hold him from her. You can't tell him by objecting to seeing her, and it probably true just as he says, that he can for her merely as a friend. As how, as she goes away soon you will have all the advantage of being on the spot and can afford to be generous.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a young girl of 19 and am in love with a young fellow of the same age. I haven't heard from him for some three or four weeks. He told me that he thought I was a very respectable girl and that he thought quite a bit of me. Now, Mrs. Lee, I do not have very many friends of either sex. I get so lonesome at home every night. I feel that I am being cheated of something when I see other girls going out with their beaux at the time. Mrs. Lee, what do you think? I have a date with a fellow once or twice a week, but they never do. I don't drink or smoke, but I do indulge in some petting, but I always draw the line when the go too far. Mrs. Lee, how can I win this fellow and how can I become more popular?"

"LONESOME AND SAD—"

Maybe you are too anxious, the boys won't be chased, you know. Be jolly and sympathetic and interested in them and do things. The same recipe will help your friends. If you can, try change of location for awhile.

"I want to go home as much as you do," said she. "But I am too tired to start tonight. How beautiful it is, and how quiet. Let's camp here for the night. After all we may never come this way again and there's no use hurrying. Husband, look! Whom do I see? A bird! He walks this way! Isn't he behaving queerly? What is he doing? Let's go over and ask him!"

SPEEDER TAKES STAKE EVENT IN FAST TIME; GOOD PROGRAM HELD

Indiana Horse Takes Harness Cup; The Belmont Wins 2:14 Trot Event After Trotting First Heat In 2:10 3-4.

By PHIL FRAME

LaFayette, owned and driven by W. H. Marvin, LaFayette, Ind., won the three-year-old and under pace, a $500 stake race, feature event on Thursday's Southwestern Ohio Shortstart Circuit program at the Greene County Fair, winning the first and fourth heats over a field of eleven starters, after having finished second in the second heat and fourth in the third.

The winning owner was also presented with a loving cup by Harness Cigar Store, this city.

In winning the first heat in the fast time of 2:09 3/4, LaFayette made the best time of the afternoon. Abbe Guy won the second heat in a nose finish and Queen Abbe the third, requiring an extra heat to determine the winner of the race.

In the fourth heat, LaFayette won with something to spare as the other two heat winners broke badly.

The 2:22 trot, also a four-heat event, was won by Stella Dillon, owned by E. A. Boslen, Chattanooga, Tenn., and driven by Russell, taking the first and fourth heats after finishing third in the second and third brushes.

Stella Dillon won the first heat in 2:12 1/2, Ruth M. the second in 2:14 1/2, Bellwether, a rank outsider the third in 2:15 1/2. The deciding heat was no hippodrome affair and Stella Dillon came from behind to defeat the other heat winners. The race was worth $500 and was the Xenia Man Highly Indebted New Medicine After It Completely Restored His Health.

The steady stream of voluntary reports from former sufferers of stomach, liver, kidney and bowel troubles or rheumatism and neuritis prove conclusively the unusual merit of this new Konjola medicine. Surprising statements are received every day by the Konjola Man at the Gallaher Drug Store, Xenia, where he is explaining the merits of this medicine to large crowds daily. One of the latest to tell about the benefits received through the use of this medicine is Mr. William Wright, Route No. 4, Xenia.

"I believe that I am doing right by telling others about the splendid merits of Konjola," said Mr. Wright. "This medicine has restored my health by banishing a severe case of stomach trouble and nervousness."

"I really hated to see night approaching because I knew that when I went to bed it would be several hours before I could get to sleep. As soon as I got in bed I would begin to roll and toss and then when I did get to sleep by the time I got up the next morning I felt as if I had not been to bed at all. I was told this condition came from my nerves which were in terrible shape. Besides this trouble my stomach was also very disordered. Everything that I ate fermented gas that bloated me terribly. A hot sour liquid rose into my mouth that burned like fire. I became terribly short of breath and the least exertion wore me out. I really had to be very careful what I ate. As this had been my condition for some time I began to think I would never be well again and consequently I was very discouraged."

"But one day I heard about the amazing work of Konjola and so I decided to give this medicine a trial. It is a blessing that I did because right from the start it helped me and I soon knew that I would be completely relieved of all my health troubles. Day by day my nerves became stronger and by the time I had completed the treatment I was able to sleep through the entire night. It seems to me that I fall asleep the minute my head touches the pillow and when I get up the next morning I feel greatly refreshed and full of energy. Konjola also regulated my stomach organs so that I can eat whatever is placed before me without the re-occurrence of a single stomach symptom. The gas bloating is ended and I never belch up that sour liquid as I formerly did. Since my stomach is in good condition my heart does not act in a peculiar manner and I am never short of breath. In every way this medicine has benefited me and I am only too glad to recommend and endorse it to others."

The Konjola Man is at the Gallaher Drug Store, Xenia, where he is daily meeting the public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy. Free samples given.

DOWNTOWNERS BEAT ST. BRIGID OUTFIT IN NATIONAL LOOP

Donovan's Triple Enables School To Escape Shut-Out

The Downtown Country Club softball team kept hot on the heels of the league-leading Harness Cigars by defeating St. Brigid High School 15 to 1 in a National League game Thursday night at Cox Memorial Athletic Field.

A first-inning attack, which netted nine runs, enabled the second-place team to coast to an easy victory. The parochial school, after being blanked for seven rounds, escaped a shutout by pushing one run across the plate in the eighth.

With one out, Donovan tripled to right center and scored a moment later.

Campbell, after a bad start, settled down and pitched good ball for St. Brigid until he weakened in the last two innings. Frame pitched for the winners.

St. Brigid lineup: Kennedy, 3b; Powers, 1b; Killeen, cf; Ernst, ss; Campbell, p; Combs, 2b; Hornick, lf; Donovan, rf; Hibbert, c.

MRS. MOLLA MALLORY

Mrs. Franklin I. (Molla) Bjurstedt Mallory, many times winner of the American national tennis championship and a net player of international note, is of Norse descent.

As Miss Bjurstedt, the daughter of the Vikings, she won the American crown for 1915, 1916 and 1918. She also ruled as tennis queen after the famous Patriotic tournament, in 1917.

After her marriage Mrs. Mallory won the title in 1920, 1921 and 1922, when her great reign was ended by Helen Wills. Mrs. Mallory came back in 1926 and won her eighth title.

Early indications were that the program would be marred by rain. It began to rain after the third heat had been completed but soon stopped and the afternoon turned out to be perfect for racing. The track was fast.

William Haston, Eaton, one of the three judges, was unable to be present Thursday and his place was taken by Harry McFeeley, Osborn, who has served as judge at the county fair here in past years.

With the afternoon card marked by two four-heat events, making eleven heats in all, it took about three and one-half hours to complete the program. The grandstand was completely filled.

United States Senator Simeon D. Fess, now at his home in Yellow Springs, spent the entire day at the fair, following his annual custom, and was a guest at the judges' stand. He was an interested spectator.

Fess was keynote at the Republican National Convention at Kansas City and in this capacity was the former Herbert Hoover, formally notified presidential candidate, of his nomination this month.

LaFayette, owned by W. H. Marvin, LaFayette, Ind., finished third in 2:06 3/4 at Toledo and fourth at Kalamazoo, Mich., in 2:04 1/4, several weeks ago. LaFayette had a record of 2:09 1/4 last year as a two-year-old colt.

In the second heat of the colt stake race, Queen Abbe, owned by H. M. Marshall, Urbana, finished second but was finally set back to fifth place outside the money by the judges after protests were made the colt was allowed to run.

Abbe Guy won the heat. LaFayette, which finished third, was placed second from fourth to third and Demas Harvester from fifth to fourth.

Fans registered disappointment when Missing Wonder, owned by William Irwin, Lebanon, and trained by Joe Hagler, Xenia, which had been nominated for the 2:14 trot Thursday, was scratched.

The Xenia Municipal Band entertained fair patrons with music between heats of the races Thursday.

The office stenog's old man has a new straw hat. But the only way you can tell it is because it's clean.

His last hat helmet almost became a family heirloom. When he threw it away there was nothing left but the sweatband.

He looked like a tramp in his old grass derby, but the new one will get him a job on any vaudeville circuit.

If he had four more ounces of brains the lidpiece would be only twice too large.

It has a nice quiet band like the American flag. When he crosses a street, traffic comes to a standstill.

When he brought it home the neighbor's children rushed out to see the elephant. They thought a circus was in town.

His family is thankful for one thing. Summer is only three months long.

JAMESTOWN TEAM WINS ANNUAL FAIR QUOT TOURNAMENT

Merritt And Sadders Total 181 Points To Win Title

Representing Jamestown, Merritt and Sadders won the annual inter-city quito tournament at the Greene County Fair by scoring an aggregate of 181 points over the today period. The tourney ended Thursday.

Wagner and Devos placed second with a total of 170; Vannorsdall and Gannon third with 125, and Hughes and Peele fourth with 120. First prize is $12.50; second, $7.50 and third, $5.

Sadders was high-scorer of the tournament with ninety-three points for three matches, followed by Wagner with eighty-nine and Merritt with eighty-eight.

In tourney matches played Thursday, Merritt and Sadders won three straight from Gannon and Vannorsdall, while Wagner and Devos took three in a row from Hughes and Peele. Vannorsdall and Gannon defeated Peele and Hughes two out of three games.

AMERICAN RAILWAY EXPRESS TEAM WILL OPPOSE RESERVES

The American Railway Express baseball team, composed of leading Dayton and Piqua players, and boasting a season's record at least as good as that of the Reserves, will play the local team Sunday afternoon at Washington Park.

Both teams have dropped out of two games, the Reserves having won fourteen against thirteen for the visitors.

The Dayton and Piqua team's lineup will include Hess in left field; Oliver at second; Tidd at shortstop; Rosenbeck in center field; Colson at first; R. Thomas in right field; H. Thompson at third; Coonack behind the plate, and Dobbelt pitching.

Durnbaugh, slugging Reserve outfielder, who missed last Sunday's game because he was enjoying a vacation of two weeks, will be back in the lineup Sunday.

Two umpires instead of one will officiate the contest.

COUNTY BUDGET FOR 1929 ASKS $266,000 IN APPROPRIATIONS

Greene County's budget for 1929, on file with County Auditor R. O. Wead, calls for $266,000 for next year and is identical in most respects with the appropriations sought for 1928.

The budget, as approved by County Commissioners, seeks $212,000 inside the fifteen-mill limitation, including $148,000 in the general county fund, $54,000 for the interest and sinking fund and $10,000 for the county road and bridge fund.

The budget statement shows that receipts for 1927 amounted to $177,872.71 and that for 1928, based on actual receipts the first six months, the figure is $196,190.04. Expenditures in 1927 totaled $160,984.11 and in 1928, $183,881, leaving a balance last December 31 of $12,309.04.

Auditor Wead announces that the 1929 budget request of every taxing district in the county is now on file.

The County Budget Commission will hold its annual organization meeting next Monday morning, prior to beginning consideration of the budgets.

CHAUTAUQUA WILL BE ON FLYNN LOT

The Redpath Chautauqua tent will be located on Detroit Blvd., on the Flynn lot, instead of on the site of old Central High School, it was announced Friday.

The sale of the Chautauqua tickets is making good progress. Mrs. Walter Dean says John Dean, of the Redpath Co., will be in Xenia Saturday to arrange the program.

SEEK RELATIVES OF WOMAN AFTER DEATH

Miss Julia Williams, 69, colored, died at the Dayton State Hospital Friday morning, according to information received here. Hospital records show she was committed from Xenia January 29, 1879, and had been an inmate of the institution since that time. J. E. Watts, probation officer, is attempting to locate relatives of Miss Williams before arrangements for burial are made. Old residents Friday had failed to help him and anyone having information concerning the woman's family is asked to communicate with Mr. Watts.

ROSS TOWNSHIP

Mrs. William Klontz was called to Dayton Sunday on account of the illness of her granddaughter Anna Louise Jones.

Mrs. William Schlusworth and son Harry attended the Bland reunion at Milford Center last Sunday.

Miss Mary Frances Klontz returned to St. Joseph, Mo., Friday after spending her vacation with her parents, Mr. Edwin Klontz and family.

Mrs. William Sheely and son, George visited friends at Seven Caves near Bainbridge last Sunday.

Mr. McKnight and family of Iowa, are visiting relatives here. Mrs. McKnight was Miss Mary Buck before her marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Brakefield are moving to Springfield this week.

Several from here attended the funeral of Miss Helen Flax near South Solon last week. They were former residents here.

Miss Helen Flax, 22, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Flax, near South Solon, died in Grant Hospital, Columbus, Tuesday following an operation for appendicitis performed last Sunday.

She was a graduate of the South Solon High School, and leaves besides her parents three brothers and one sister: Harold, Eugene and Russell Flax and Miss Lucile Flax, all at home.

Funeral services were held Thursday at 2 p. m. at the residence near South Solon with interment in the family plot in Kirkwood cemetery.

Broadway Hostesses---and Their Nemesis

Somehow Helen Morgan (left) and Texas Guinan, rival night club hostesses, always managed to get the better of any argument with a mere male over the prohibition question. But when a woman took the trail it was a different story. Mrs. Mabel W. Willebrandt (center), assistant attorney-general in charge of dry violation cases, promptly caused these two shining lights of the Gay White Way to be indicted and announced she will press their prosecution.

TWO KILLED WHEN AUTO HITS FREIGHT

TOLEDO, O., Aug. 3.—Two men were killed and a third slightly injured early today when the light roadster in which they were riding crashed into a moving Nickel Plate freight train at the terminal crossing on Woodville Road here.

While neither of the dead men has been positively identified, they are believed to be Ollie Hudson, 22, and Russell Buford, both of Toledo. The latter was said to have been driving the roadster when the tragedy occurred.

Wilbur Sowers, 20, also of Toledo, is in Mercy Hospital here suffering from a severed artery and slight lacerations sustained in the crash.

CHILDREN HURT

URBANA, O., Aug. 3.—When an automobile overturned near North Lewisburg three children were hurt, two of whom were in the hospital today. They were Dorothy Hudson, 14, and Paul Harmon, 6. The other child Georgia Harmon, 7, was taken home. Four others in the car suffered only from shock.

Creamed Comments On S.S. Lesson

At the close of a successful missionary journey there arose in the church at Antioch a controversy as to long established rites that were being discarded; the sincerity of both sides made possible a satisfactory settlement by means of a council at Jerusalem consisting of the recognized church leaders.

V. 1. "And certain men came down from Judea and taught the brethren saying, except ye be circumcised after the custom of Moses, ye can not be saved." Circumcision had come to stand for purity, freedom and holiness and from vileness such as found in other religions. There was historical soundness in this view but there was a failure to see that the same ends could be gained by the ways of Christian liberty and brotherhood.

V. 3. "They passed through both Phenicia and Samaria, declaring the conversion of the Gentiles; and they caused great joy unto all the brethren." Paul and Barnabas were selected as representatives of the new program of Christian liberty and on their way to the Jerusalem council they reported the success of the gospel in the first missionary journey, which news was hailed with joy. One way of testing our religion is to note our emotions when we hear of the success of the gospel.

V. 4. "And when they were come to Jerusalem they were received of the church and the apostles and the elders, and they rehearsed all things that God had done with them." They touched lightly upon their hardships, or their heroism; they made much of divine protection, deliverances from peril, the repentance that followed their preaching and the faithfulness of the new converts.

Vs. 5, 6. "But there rose certain of the sect of the Pharisees who believed, saying, it is needful to circumcise them, and to charge them to keep the law of Moses. And the apostles and elders came together to consider of this matter." Differences of opinion speedily lead to great schisms unless the men on both sides meet and talk things over fully, frankly; no man is put down who speaks upon a question sincerely; every man who does not speak intelligently and sincerely will make himself down.

Vs. 7, 8. "Peter rose up and said, brethren ye know that a good while ago God made choice among you that by my mouth the Gentiles should hear the word of the gospel and believe. And God, who knoweth the heart, bare them witness, giving them the Holy Spirit, even as he did unto us." Peter spoke out of his former experience as a pioneer in making Gentile converts who were every evidence of being genuine since they were honored in that God gave them the Holy Spirit.

Vs. 10, 11. "Now therefore, why make ye trial of God that ye should put a yoke upon the neck of the disciples which neither our fathers nor we are able to bear? But we believe that we shall be saved through the grace of the Lord Jesus, in like manner as they." Certain rules and regulations are necessary for righteous living but when carried too far, they become a burden. Peter's conclusion is a strong affirmation of the universality of Christian freedom and of the liberty of grace.

It is estimated that there are 150,000 children now enrolled in classes for week-day religious instruction. Approximately 1000 cities and towns have made provision for supplementing in this way, showing an increasing co-operation between denominations as well as with the public schools.

Discussion on Questions S.S. Lesson

1. What is Christian liberty? What are the limitations of Christian liberty?

2. What are the dangers connected with religious controversies?

3. Of what value are conferences in settling disputes?

4. What were the principles that evidently were applied in the council meeting in this lesson?

5. What compromises enter in the settling of disputes?

6. What are the advantages and the disadvantages of an open forum?

Clericus says — "Controversy heats the blood and intensifies points of opposition, but conferences cool passion and emphasize points of agreement. In all our differences we should strive to come together to consider the matter."

Lesson Prayer. "O God, we thank Thee for freedom in Christ; help us to acknowledge the limitations of freedom that we may keep within the bounds of Christian liberty and build together a Christian brotherhood."

BOOK REVIEW

"A Manual of Christian Beliefs" by Lewis J. Chas. Scribner's Sons presents such subjects as the existence and activities of God, Evil in Relation to the Human Race and in Relation to God, Christ and the Church and Life Eternal with other basic questions.

"Who is the Great I AM?" Brooks, The Biola Book Room, 536 S. Hope Street, Los Angeles, Cal., is a paper covered booklet providing devotional reading on Christ with his many attributes and powers.

A Methodist Episcopal Church in San Francisco is planning to erect a skyscraper church building. Part of the building will be made into a hotel with five hundred rooms.

Word has been received by the Federal Council of Churches that plans are being made to hold an International Christian Press Conference and Exhibit in Cologne, Germany, August 16-22. The date immediately precedes the Prague Conference of the World Alliance for Promoting International Friendship through the churches.

A petition to the pope signed by thirty-three cardinals and 560 bishops requests him to give his consent and blessing to the new "Feast of Christ the Worker." The aim of such a festival is to stress the dignity of labor by the example of the carpenter of Nazareth and to show to the laboring classes that the church is in sympathy with labor.

A World Youth Peace Congress will be held in Eerde, Holland, August 17-26, for the purpose of studying the abstract causes of war and to endeavor to arouse the youth of the world to action in dealing with war elimination. Five hundred delegates are expected, 350 from Europe, 100 from the Americas and fifty from Asia, Africa and Australia. Eighty will go from the United States.

1. WHAT PART SHOULD THE PASTOR HAVE IN SUNDAY SCHOOL? The minister should have a large place in the activities of the Sunday School. This does not mean necessarily that he should teach a class regularly. He ought certainly to keep in close touch with the weekly training class. He should sometimes lead the worship services of the different departments. He needs to have a large part in teachers' conferences and especially in the workers' conferences. His pastoral visiting should function wherever possible into the work of the Sunday School. He should be a member of the committee on religious education and while not necessarily a professional, he is a general practitioner and as such has good counsel.

2. WHAT IS THE NEED OF A COMMITTEE ON RELIGIOUS EDUCATION AND HOW IS IT COMPOSED?

The modern Sunday School is so differently organized and offers unusual opportunity for the church to serve childhood and youth that the work calls for increased consideration; hence a special committee popularly called the committee on religious education. It consists of the minister, the general superintendent, departmental superintendents, the secretary-treasurer, the director of religious education and the presidents of all educational organizations of the church with some helpful members at large. It should be responsible for the educational policies and the program of religious education of the church.

DECAY OF TALENT UNUSED.

In one of the places in the city of Genoa, there is a glass case very carefully guarded. It contains a violin used by the great violinist Paganini. The violin was bequeathed to the city of Genoa, on condition that it should never be used again.

It has been preserved since then as the greatest treasure of the city. But the violin is perishing and sometime will fall to pieces. When it was used and the touch of the bow kept in vibration, it was safe. Now that it is perfectly still, it is attacked by insects which are destroying the wood.

Under the hand of its master, it gave forth the most wonderful music a violin has ever produced. Now it is silent and useless.

What is true of this violin is true of talents and capabilities; if they are not used they will decay and be lost.—D. Carl Yoder.

THE BETTER WAY

THE WORLD COURT AGAIN.

"The belief is growing that the question of American membership in the Permanent Court of International Justice may again become a vital public issue. The Senate on January 27th, 1926 by a vote of its members gave its advice and consent to the adherence of the United States to the World Court. As is well known, the Geneva Conference of Signatory States declared its inability to accept without modification the fourth and fifth reservations laid down by the Senate in its vote of adherence. These states, however, referred to such exchange of views as the government of the United States may think useful."

No such exchange of views has been considered. The Court has been neglected not only by its enemies but by its friends. Two years ago, enthusiasm for this cause was at white heat. Church assemblies were passing resolutions in favor of America's entrance into the court. Little has been heard regarding this issue in recent months.

Signs are now in evidence that an increasing number of Americans are unwilling to have this important issue shelved. Sen. Gillett's resolution suggesting to the President "the advisability of further exchange of views with the signatory states in order to establish whether the differences between the United States and the signatory states" will be widely welcomed throughout the country. The coming of the World Court, it is hoped, will be a cognate of this renewed interest in the World Court question.

The Church Invites You

A SACRED MEMORY

Rev. Fred Smith says "There were times, doubtless, when my young spirit rebelled against going to morning church service but the significant thing is that I can not now recall them."

"The thing I remember is the fragrant memory of sitting with Dad in the family pew. He believed in church-going. He could sing on occasion. I did not particularly listen for this then. But it is significant that I remember now."

The influence for good in years to come follows church attendance. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?—D. Carl Yoder.

HOME EDUCATION

DECAY OF TALENT UNUSED.

In one of the places in the city of Genoa, there is a glass case very carefully guarded. It contains a violin used by the great violinist Paganini. The violin was bequeathed to the city of Genoa, on condition that it should never be used again.

It has been preserved since then as the greatest treasure of the city. But the violin is perishing and sometime will fall to pieces. When it was used and the touch of the bow kept in vibration, it was safe. Now that it is perfectly still, it is attacked by insects which are destroying the wood.

Under the hand of its master, it gave forth the most wonderful music a violin has ever produced. Now it is silent and useless.

What is true of this violin is true of talents and capabilities; if they are not used they will decay and be lost.—D. Carl Yoder.

THE BETTER WAY

THE WORLD COURT AGAIN.

"The belief is growing that the question of American membership in the Permanent Court of International Justice may again become a vital public issue. The Senate on January 27th, 1926 by a vote of its members gave its advice and consent to the adherence of the United States to the World Court. As is well known, the Geneva Conference of Signatory States declared its inability to accept without modification the fourth and fifth reservations laid down by the Senate in its vote of adherence. These states, however, referred to such exchange of views as the government of the United States may think useful."

No such exchange of views has been considered. The Court has been neglected not only by its enemies but by its friends. Two years ago, enthusiasm for this cause was at white heat. Church assemblies were passing resolutions in favor of America's entrance into the court. Little has been heard regarding this issue in recent months.

Signs are now in evidence that an increasing number of Americans are unwilling to have this important issue shelved. Sen. Gillett's resolution suggesting to the President "the advisability of further exchange of views with the signatory states in order to establish whether the differences between the United States and the signatory states" will be widely welcomed throughout the country. The coming of the World Court, it is hoped, will be a cognate of this renewed interest in the World Court question.

Charging "male governors" have made a sorry "mess of things," Mrs. Edith M. MacFadden of Cambridge has announced her candidacy for governor of Massachusetts on the Republican ticket. She promises efficiency in office if elected.

INDUSTRIAL USE OF WASTE ADVANCED AS RELIEF FOR FARMERS

Relief of agriculture by elimination of farm waste through development of by-products, was urged by H. E. Rice, Xenia, unopposed candidate for the Democratic nomination for congress from the seventh district, when he opened his campaign at a party dinner given by the General Denver Hotel, Wilmington, Thursday.

Rice said the McNary-Haugen bill is a "will of the wisp that lures into dangerous bogs" and claimed that collapse of a similar structure in Argentina in 1922 rocked the entire financial world. Application of industrial policies to farm products is the remedy he urges for farm conditions.

"It is now possible," said Rice, "through the activities of chemists, to get about 300 waste products out of corn stalks, straw and chaff. From corn stalks are now made cellulose, wall board, rayon silk, celluloid films, various other commodities. Corn now yields sugar in large quantities and wood alcohol, with its great power possibilities, may be made out of nearly everything that grows. The Iowa State College at Ames has led in showing the possibilities of profit in millions of tons of waste. The scientific work has culminated in the erection of a great factory at Danville, Ill., where waste is now converted into huge profits."

Rice suggested government cooperation in building similar factories in agricultural sections to make use of the waste products from farms, thus increasing the number of factory employees and increasing the farmer's income from 40 to 100 per cent by making use of his by-products.

READ THIS FIRST:

Janet Mary James, eighteen, sweet and clever and good, has an ambition to go on the stage because her mother, who died the night she was born, had been a famous opera star. In New York Janet meets Dr. Ballard Riley, who is known as a woman hater. Ballard dates her up, and Janet gets a lot of fun out of having a date with him. Janet meets Flavia Marlowe, Sir Henry Martindale and "Putty" Bigelow. Flavia, about fifty years old, is beginning to wrinkle and trying to hide it. She is wealthy, and has a studio in the Village. Flavia persuades Janet to lease a studio. It is Janet's first evening in her new home, and she is entertaining Flavia and her friends. Later there is a knock at the door, and Ballard Riley steps in.

In Flavia's words, Ballard threw a wet blanket on the party the minute he came in. After the guests depart, Ballard lectures Janet for taking up with the Villagers. "Putty" Bigelow, boy friend of Flavia, makes an unexpected call on Janet. He grabs Janet around the waist and lifts her up, attempting to kiss her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XV.
Janet giggled out of his arms and he stood back and laughed at her.

"Honest, Angel, I don't think you're glad to see papa! But wait till you see the nice bottle he brought you."

He pulled a bottle of gin from under his coat and started for the kitchenette.

"We're going to have a nice little snifter, Angel."

"Thank you, I had quite enough last night. Keep it for yourself, Mr. Bigelow."

"Mister Bigelow! Oh, I've been promoted, have I?"

Janet didn't answer, but walked away and sat on the piano bench. Putty went into the kitchen, and she heard him cracking ice. She wanted him to leave—his presence was more than annoying. But how to get him out was a question soon to be solved in a most unpleasant manner.

Putty had no more than brought the cocktails in and sat down on the bench beside Janet than there was a knock on the door and Flavia walked in. She stood rooted to the floor and her face went white.

Janet looked at her in utter amazement. Why should Flavia look like that? She found her voice and ran over to her.

"Oh, hello, Flavia, I thought you'd be here soon!"

Flavia raised her hand and pushed Janet away. Her voice was hard, and her eyes glared quite so soon, I guess. I'm sorry I interrupted your little tete-a-tete."

Janet looked at Putty, and there was scorn in her eyes.

"Well, Putty, you see what you've done. You know you had no business coming here without Flavia."

Flavia's answer was a short, hysterical laugh.

"Oh, that's priceless! Blame it on Putty, I suppose. This wasn't prearranged, of course. Just a sort of stop-off social call on his way to my place."

Janet was too hurt to be angry. She looked from Flavia to Putty, imploringly. He picked up his hat and sauntered out insolently. Flavia turned, and her face was twisted with anger.

"I've never done anything for anyone in my life, and had a square deal from them. The more I do the more certain they are to stab me in the back. I see you are no exception—after all I've done for you."

Her parting shot was the worst. It took Janet's breath when Flavia turned at the door.

"But what can one expect when one picks up a little nobody. You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear."

Janet's reaction was purely one of hurt. There was no anger in her feeling toward Flavia. She remembered all the nice, kind things she had done. Over and over she said to herself:

"She must have been feeling badly about it to say all those terrible things to me."

Janet tried to put herself in Flavia's position. Tried to imagine herself getting old like Flavia—and her pity was strengthened. She had never reconciled herself to Flavia playing around with a boy half her age, but told herself that was none of her business. If she could get away with it, more power to her! There was a great deal of charity in Janet's make-up.

As for Putty, she hoped, that some day she would have a chance to tell him what a rotter he really was. Oh, no! He wouldn't take the blame and tell Flavia he had dropped in and surprised her. He wasn't man enough. He would just Janet, her heart singing, took a whirl around the room. Keep silent, kiss her a few times, and everything would be all right as far as he was concerned.

But Janet was wrong in her last analysis. Putty was tired of Flavia Janet, in her youth and beauty, had stirred in him emotions of which the passe Flavia was incapable of awakening. Outside, he turned, bowed very low over Flavia's hand sarcastically, and walked off down the street.

Flavia burst into tears, hailed a cab and went home. Putty went to the drug store on the corner and called a girl he hadn't seen for six months. She welcomed him back with open arms and a full cellar.

Janet was deep in thought and blue as indigo when Ballard Riley telephoned.

"Oh, thank goodness, you called. I'm down in the dumps something fierce."

"Oh, no; just me fatal be-a-uty, I've gone and vamped an old lady's boy friend—or she thinks I've robbed her cradle, rather. There was a stormy session here about an hour ago."

"Well, I'm not surprised. Hope you haven't had dinner."

"No. Us gals never eat until we can't hold out any longer."

"All right, gold digger. See you in about half an hour."

Janet hung up, her heart singing. She took a whirl around the room. Now what to wear? She decided on the white organdie dress that Ballard had never seen.

And the little drooping lace hat. Ballard Riley prided himself upon his indifference toward women. He had been too busy making good to think much about them. He had been a sort of here today and gone tomorrow fellow. His affairs were few and far between. Women threw themselves at him and he had decided they were more or less all alike.

Janet was so pretty and interesting he felt a deep interest in her. He thought it was because he was interested in seeing her get the right start. Too bad if a kid like that made a fool of herself when she had so much charm and ability. He was thinking about all this on his way to the Village.

When she opened the door in the plain little organdie with the black hair wound in a halo around her head, framing her cameo face, Ballard Riley gasped. It was with difficulty that he shook hands with her and stepped inside. His first impulse was to take her in his arms. He had never wanted to hold anyone so much in his life. The impulse came over him in a wave of emotion.

Janet's thoughts were the same. She wondered if he would hold her—and hoped that he would kiss her. That she wanted him to take her in his arms embarrassed her. Both made a conscious effort to hide their feelings. Janet broke the suspense.

"Well, my 'Bed Time Story Knight,' I slept very well, thank you."

He bowed very low over her hand.

"It was an honor, Princess, to tuck such a nice little girl in her little bed."

She blushed and laughed.

"Well, it sure was a red letter day in my night life."

"Forget it!"

Janet, with the lace hat framing her face, was prettier than ever. He looked at his watch.

"It's seven-thirty now. We won't have time to see a show, I'm afraid."

By SIDNEY SMITH

The Theater

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Broadway shows for the smaller cities and towns of the country, with the original casts is the latest plan of theatrical producers. In the flesh and blood? Hardly. It's to be by the talking motion picture and virtually means the end of the theatrical touring companies.

Plans practically completed by will be a factor in the plans, however. The association recently warned its members to act cautiously in regard to talking film contracts. The association's attitude was expressed by Frank Gilmore, executive secretary of the association who said:

"The association does not question that the managers will ask equity for its ruling on this matter before embarking on any such project. But in the meantime equity members are forbidden to make any such recording of their current productions without first consulting equity headquarters."

The producers mentioned have obtained control of the Vocafilm Corporation of America with offices and studios in New York, and are expecting to begin making mechanical reproductions of their current theatrical successes in about six weeks, using the original cast.

The early Woods production of this season, "Jealousy", with Fay Baynter and Glenn Hunter as its stars is expected to be one of the first plays presented. Others to follow in rapid order are "Fast Life", "A Man With Red Hair", an English play and a production in which Florence Reed will star. Several Shubert musical shows will follow in an effort to build up an extensive program for the smaller cities so that theatrical owners will be induced to install the Vocafilm process which is said to cost only about $3,500 and is much cheaper than other similar processes.

Plays may be recorded in the theater in which they are being produced, the time required being about two weeks.

Poems that Live

A SONG THE GRASS SINGS

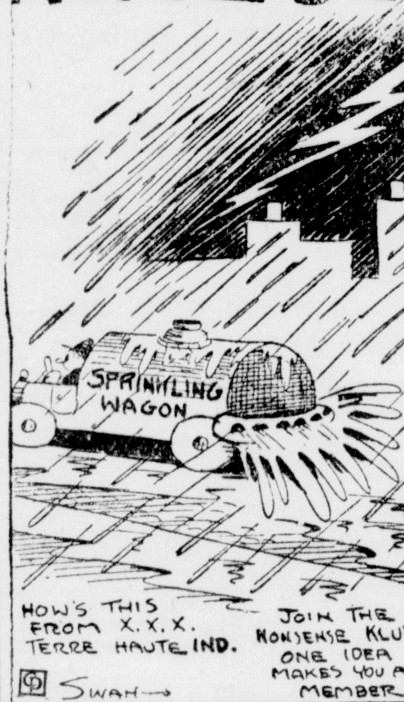

THE violet is much too shy,
The rose too little so;
I think I'll ask the buttercup
If I may be her beau.

When winds go by, I'll nod to her
And she will nod to me,
And I will kiss her on the cheek
As gently as may be.

And when the mower cuts us
down,
Together we will pass,
I smiling at the buttercup,
She smiling at the grass.

POLITICAL MILLS GRINDING
Candidates Working Feverishly To Inspire Interest In Coming Primary

The Greene County Fairgrounds was infested with politicians this week as office-seekers put the finishing touches on their campaigns before the primary August 14. Fair visitors were button-holed right and left by the ambitious gentry passing out cards and urging that the "X" mark be put in the proper place on the ballots.

Myers R. Cooper, Cincinnati business man, who was the Republican standard-bearer in the gubernatorial race two years ago, seems to be a "man without a country" as far as local politics are concerned. Little seems to be done here in behalf of Cooper, who visited Xenia with a crowd of Cincinnati boosters Tuesday. He spoke in the shadow of a street banner proclaiming "Begg for Governor", erected by a group headed by that independent in political thought, Captain Charley Darlington.

Fred Anderson, who doesn't claim to be a politician at all is interested in Cooper's candidacy because of a personal friendship. "Cooper will be the nominee", he says with confidence.

All seems to be quiet locally along the senatorial battle lines as none of the candidates appear to be doing anything to help themselves down here. That far-famed warrior, General Jacob S. Coxey, of Massillon, passed out his literature here recently and announced that he is still fighting for the same old principle of free money to which he has added a sideline of prohibition repeal.

Frank Johnson, Xenia barrister, is making game fight to win the Republican nomination for congress from the seventh district away from Charley Brand, Urbana, the incumbent. Johnson is making political capital out of Brand's well-known opposition to Hoover, before the secretary of commerce was selected as the party's choice for president. Brand's speech in congress got him in "Dutch" and Johnson is not letting him forget about the unpleasant occasion.

In the meantime Harry E. Rice, Xenia, Democratic candidate for the same nomination, is having an easy time of it because he has no opposition. Rice unfolded a brand tation on the board, is counting on heavy support from city precincts.

The contest for the office of county surveyor was a surprise to many and probably just as much a surprise to W. J. Davis, the incumbent as to anyone. Because of the fact that the incumbent must be a civil engineer, the field for this office has been narrowed in the past to the point of nothing. Davis was practically drafted for the job when he was first elected. Harry Sparks, whose profession as engineer makes him a qualified candidate, is now opposing Davis for the office. The contest has not yet attracted a great deal of attention.

Democrats locally seem to be deserting Senator Cy Locher, appointee of Governor Donahue to succeed the late Frank B. Willis, in favor of Graham Hunt, the Cincinnati lawyer. Hunt's friends accuse Locher of "jockeying" between the liberals and the Anti-Saloon League, and Hunt's entrance in the race came after it was revealed that Locher had written the League declaring himself a dry but admitting "jockeying" with the liberal element. The letter was written in confidence personally to a certain F. J. Dustman, of the American Issue, dry publication, and Dustman promptly made it public, greatly to the embarrassment of Mr. Locher. Political leaders now claim a victory for Hunt, who is a supporter of Al Smith. A straight wet and dry fight, it now appears.

John W. Prugh, Xenia's genial mayor and Cal Wright, Cedarville, the incumbent, are battling for the nomination for probate judge in the primary, neither taking advantage of the privilege of the judicial ticket to wait until November to make their fight. Judge Wright, who was deputy under ex-Judge Marshall, is winding up his first term on the bench, and is anxious to add another to his record. Mayor Prugh has ambitions that run counter-wise. He is pointing to his career of public-spirited endeavor for Xenia and Greene County and to his record in city council, city commission and as state superintendent of building and loans, to prove he is qualified for the probate judgeship. Judge Wright, who lived in Xenia for part of his term, has returned to his old home at Cedarville. He also is conducting a quiet campaign.

The attempt of John North, Xenia, former county commissioner, to win back his seat on that board, precipitated the fight for two vacancies to occur on the commission. J. Harve Lackey, of Ross Twp., and Bert Beam, of Spring Valley Twp., are the incumbents who must make the race for re-election this time. North, always a champion of the theory that Xenia should have represen-

WILLIAM S. HOWARD
CANDIDATE FOR
Prosecuting Attorney

Mr. William S. Howard is a candidate for the office of PROSECUTING ATTORNEY of Greene County, Ohio, at the coming Republican Primary Election, August 14th, 1928.

It is the first time that Mr. Howard has ever been a candidate before the people for any office. Since his graduation from the Cincinnati Law School, he has been in the active practice of law in this city in all the State and Federal Courts.

Mr. Howard's opponent, Mr. Carl Marshall, the present incumbent of the office of Prosecuting Attorney, is seeking a third term, and this after having held office, successively as Deputy County Clerk, County Clerk, Probate Judge and is now serving his second term as Prosecuting Attorney, in all twenty years of continuous holding of public office.

If nominated and elected, Mr. Howard will give his best services to the people of Greene County.

POLISH FLYERS ON WAY TO AMERICA

COURTNEY PARTY RESCUED

FLYERS TAKEN ABOARD SHIP; REVEAL FIRE CAUSED TROUBLE

British Aviators Forced Down In Water When Menaced By Flames; Crew Being Brought To New York.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Thankful to have escaped the fate of others who unsuccessfully attempted to span the Atlantic, Captain Courtney and his companions were on board the transport liner Minnewaska enroute for this port today after having been spectacularly rescued from mid-ocean where they had landed in a blazing plane.

The Minnewaska will reach here Monday morning. Radio reports from the liner indicated that Courtney, E. B. Hosmer, Montreal banker and backer of the flight, E. W. Gilmour, radio operator, and Fred Pierce, mechanic, all were in good condition despite their narrowing experience.

The men were picked up at a point about 1,600 miles due east of New York and little more than 700 miles west of their starting point, Horta, Azores.

The fliers were in the air about fourteen hours when their plane caught fire. Realizing that nothing could be done in the air, Courtney headed his blazing plane downward toward the sea. He succeeded in landing on the rough sea without serious mishap, radio advice indicated.

The four men aboard the plane succeeded in putting the blaze out after landing on the ocean. Then came terrible hours of waiting with their plane bobbing up and down with each wave.

MELLON WILL SERVE AGAIN REPORTED IF HOOVER IS ELECTED

Donovan Is Choice For Attorney General Is Report

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—In the event of the election of Herbert Hoover it was believed in political circles here today that Secretary Mellon might be appointed for his third successive term as head of the treasury department.

Observers, however, said that it would be surprising if Mellon remained in the cabinet throughout the administration, but that he would resign within a comparatively short time. Mellon, during his eight years as secretary of the treasury, has completed all of the principal reconstruction projects.

The foreign debts, excepting that of Russia, have been liquidated and there is no further action to be taken in that connection by the treasury except collection. Arrangements have been completed for the retirement of the public debt, tax legislation has been transformed from emergency to permanent, peace-time basis, the War Finance Corporation virtually has been liquidated, the Farm Loan System remodeled, and other details of post-war financing cleared away.

Under-Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills is said to be under consideration for ambassador to Great Britain. Hoover desired to place both Mills and Col. William J. Donovan, assistant secretary of the treasury, in cabinet jobs, but both are from New York and it is not customary to name two cabinet officers from a single state. Mills is regarded as having adequate qualifications for the important diplomatic post, being wealthy and having a wide knowledge of international affairs.

Donovan would be Hoover's selection for attorney general, it was reported, while Hugh Gibson, ambassador to Belgium, was mentioned as a possibility for secretary of state. Friends of Hoover thought Dr. Julius Klein, director of foreign and domestic commerce, might be named secretary of commerce.

Both Mills and Donovan came out for Hoover early in his campaign for the nomination. Mills has a strong hold on Republican affairs in New York.

Donovan had a distinguished war record and was decorated with the congressional medal of honor, the French legion of honor and an Italian decoration as the result of extraordinary heroism during the final phase of the Meuse Argonne offensive. Donovan was assistant chief of staff of the 27th Division, New York National Guard, and commanding officer of the 165th Infantry, the old "Fighting 69th." During the war days he was "Wild Bill" Donovan.

MISSING YACHT HAS ARRIVED AT PORT

SANTANDER, Spain, Aug. 3.—The American yacht Azara, for which a wide search had been made when it failed to appear off the Spanish coast several days after the other yachts in the race for the Spanish King's cup had arrived here, was safely anchored in this port today.

The yacht was located by a government launch some distance from the coast. It was proceeding slowly, having been calmed for several days.

HOOVER WILL LEAVE EMOTIONAL APPEAL TO GOVERNOR SMITH

G. O. P. Candidate To Base Campaign On Appeal To Reason

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Aug. 3.—Herbert Hoover today served notice on his personal "board of strategy" that his campaign in the future will be conducted along the line of an "appeal to reason," rather than to "appeal to the emotions" of America's twenty million voters.

Hoover will leave to Governor Al Smith his Democratic rival, all spectacular campaign moves and conduct his own campaign on a business basis. His trip to the north woods was Hoover's last effort to win the election on a "personality" issue.

The Republican nominee made this plan to his personal advisers, most of whom have known him since his school days. The candidate indicated he had a taste of the "personality" campaign on his five-day vacation trip and that he disapproved of it. Time and again on his tour of northern California and southern Oregon, Hoover made unexpected detours to avoid crowds.

On his trip north, Hoover apparently tried to adapt himself to the "ballyhoo" type of campaign. He posed liberally for the photographers and mixed freely with the newspapermen in his entourage. He didn't like it and when ever he got an opportunity, he slipped away by himself to fish in seclusion. His fishing excursions incidentally were spent wandering through the forests and pacing woodland trails, with the angling a side issue rather than the principal attraction.

His present plans will take him back to Washington after his farm speech about August 21 in West Branch, Ia., his birthplace. After that he will make a few excursions from Washington to make "key speeches," but these will be limited to a dozen. One will be in Boston and another in New York, and a third in Chicago and a fourth probably in Detroit. The rest of the time, he will remain in Washington.

Hoover meanwhile declined to comment on the action of George N. Peek, the Moline, Ill. farm leader, in endorsing Governor Smith. Hoover's advisers declared Peek's action was forecast when the Illinoisan endorsed the Democratic farm relief plank while attacking the Republican platform.

HUNT ENDORSED BY ATLEE POMERENE

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 3.—Graham P. Hunt, Cincinnati, today had the endorsement of former Senator Atlee Pomerene, Cleveland, for the Democratic senatorial nomination. Hunt was Pomerene's Cincinnati campaign manager two years ago.

PLANE AIDS DOCTOR
COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 3.—Summoned to Athens, O., to perform an emergency operation, Dr. E. M. Freese chartered an airplane at Norton Field here and arrived in the southern Ohio town in time to operate successfully. It was learned today. The plane was piloted by Fred Davis.

DRY SPLIT WIDENS

REPORT TOM HEENEY ELOPED TO VILLAGE TO WED SWEETHEART

Challenger Proves He's Game Pug; Is On Honeymoon

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Tom Heenev, erstwhile contender for the world's heavyweight championship, is honeymooning today with the former Marion Dunn, of Port Washington, L. I., according to an unconfirmed report circulated today.

Heenev is said to have eloped to the little village of Laden-town, near Suffern, N. Y., to be married by P. Margulies, justice of the peace and proprietor of the general store.

Eddie Harvey, brother of Charlie Harvey, Heenev's manager, had no warning of Tom's matrimonial plans.

"But it's a safe bet that it's true," he said. "Tom and Miss Dunn have been very friendly since he came over to America about a year ago."

Judge Margulies was called by telephone at his store in Laden-town.

"Did you marry Tom Heenev and Marion Dunn?" he was asked.

"You'd better ask Tom that," he replied.

"Isn't it a matter of record?"

"Not yet," was the ambiguous reply.

Heenev and his bride were reported to have sought seclusion in an apartment here which is listed in the name of Isaac Rosenbaum.

At that address the telephone was answered by a man with a broad English accent. It sounded suspiciously like the voice of Tom Mortimer, Heenev's trainer.

"Mr. Heenev used to live here," the voice admitted, "but at present I think he is on his way to the coast."

WORKMEN KILLED IN SEWER CAVE-IN

CLEVELAND, Aug. 3.—Funeral services were being arranged today for two workmen who were killed late yesterday when the sides of a sewer in which they were working caved in. The victims were Clayton Williams, 40, and Peter Fletcher, 35.

Fletcher was completely buried, but Williams' head remained above the ground, and he was conscious during part of the rescue work. A doctor administered an anesthetic to quiet him. He was taken to a hospital and died later, his body crushed.

WAR VETERAN DIES AT MOTHER'S GRAVE

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 3.—Harry Arons, 36, is dead today, a belated casualty of the World War. Arons carried a decoration for bravery under fire at St. Mihiel.

His heart was affected by poison gas during that engagement.

Tuesday, his mother, Mrs. Rachel Katzman, died and yesterday she was buried. As the coffin was lowered into the grave Arons turned away, weeping. Then, he suddenly fell to the ground. A physician pronounced death due to heart failure.

KING APPROVES PROPOSED TREATY

LONDON, Aug. 3.—Royal approval of the American treaty to outlaw war was given by King George in his speech from the throne this afternoon proroguing parliament. The King did not attend in person. His speech was read.

"My government is happy to accept the treaty for renunciation of war and it is my confident expectation that, when it is completed, it will constitute a new and important guarantee for the world's peace," said the King.

SUICIDE CHEATS DIVORCE ACTION

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Efforts were being made today to communicate with Mrs. William A. Wilson, in Reno seeking a divorce, to notify her that the marital bands have been broken by death, her husband, a former employee of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company and a member of the Harvard Club here having committed suicide in his room in the Harvard Club by shooting himself with an automatic rifle.

Gun Saves Life

Sheriff J. R. Ferry, of Portage county, Ohio, owes his life to a bandit's lack of knowledge of a shotgun. Knocked down and cornered by his own gun, Ferry reached for his pistol and, as the shotgun failed to go off, shot and killed Harry Gipe, 24, of South Newberry, O., and with another shot fatally wounded Ira Clogston, 24, of the same town. The men were suspected of being chicken thieves.

PEEK WILL SUPPORT SMITH; CANDIDATE SEEKING FARM VOTE

Governor Makes Bid For Support Of Frank Lowden

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Confident of success in the south and east, Governor Al Smith has decided to wage an intensive campaign in the middle west in the belief that if he can carry a few farm states he can clinch the presidential election.

The governor's first move to win the support of Republican farmers in the corn belt resulted in an announcement by George N. Peek of Moline, Ill., regarded as the spokesman for a million middle-west farmers, that he would support the Democratic ticket. The next step to be taken by Smith in an effort to capture the farm vote will be the formation of a special committee which will have complete charge of the campaign in the agricultural centers. This committee is expected to be headed by Bernard M. Baruch and probably will have its headquarters in Chicago.

The drive for the farm votes will be concentrated in Illinois, Missouri and Wisconsin, according to close advisers of Governor Smith. There is a possibility that a farm to farm canvass may be made in these three states by the special farm relief committee in the hope of obtaining sufficient farm votes to swing the states into the Democratic column.

In addition, Smith has made a frank bid for the support of Frank O. Lowden, former Republican governor of Illinois and a militant leader in the fight for farm relief. The governor announced that in the event of his election he would seek the help of such Republicans as Lowden in drafting a concrete plan for farm relief for submission to congress at its opening session.

CHILD DROWNED

DAYTON, O., Aug. 3.—Falling from the dock at the family summer home on Winona Lake, Ind., Robert N. Hartzell, Jr., 6, son of R. N. Hartzell of Troy, O., was drowned late yesterday. The child was a nephew of James Hermann, secretary to Congressman Roy G. Fitzgerald.

CHAIRMAN WORK WILL SURVEY CONDITIONS IN MIDDLE WEST

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Satisfied that the Republican national headquarters is now organized to swing into the fall campaign at full speed, National Chairman Hubert Work today closed his desk and started out to find what the west holds in store for the Hoover-Curtis ticket.

While Chicago is the first objective, Work will go to Palo Alto for a conference with Herbert Hoover, the Republican nominee, and to San Francisco, for a meeting of far western Republican committee men and state chairmen.

Brief contacts at stops along the way and train conferences are counted upon by the chairman to help him get a true picture of the situation and set the Republican organization in motion.

TREASURER OF OHIO ANTI-SALOON BODY DISAPPROVES LIST

Superintendent Moore Ignores Protests On Endorsements.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 3.—C. L. Dickey, Columbus, treasurer of the Ohio Anti-Saloon League today was listed among the prominent officials of the league who publicly voiced their disapproval of the recent "sample" ballot issued by Supt. E. J. Moore, of the league, endorsing Myers Y. Cooper, Cincinnati, alone of the candidates for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

Dickey, who attended the session of the league's policy committee here July 15, when the dry records of Cooper and Congressman James T. Begg, Sandusky, also a G. O. P. gubernatorial candidate, were endorsed, indicated that the league's headquarters committee will hold Dr. Moore responsible until he explains the circumstances surrounding the issuance of the "sample" ballot.

Superintendent Moore is at Lakeside. It was stated that he refused to reply to the recent charges, made by E. R. Root, Medina, and Norman C. Sherwood, Fremont, members of the league's board of trustees, that the issuance of the "sample" ballot was in disregard of instructions of the league's executive committee.

Friends of Begg declared that Rand J. Dushman, Columbus publicity man and son of Freeman L. Dushman, editor of the American Issue, which contained an editorial preferring Cooper to Begg, was directing Cooper's publicity.

Attorney Graham P. Hunt, Cincinnati, a Democratic candidate for U. S. Senator, and other candidates for state offices, said they never received any of the questionnaires distributed among political candidates by officials of the W. C. T. U. of Ohio. The W. C. T. U. "White" list did not approve Hunt's candidacy. Officials of the organization said he did not answer the questionnaire.

In a public statement, Mrs. Florence D. Richard, Toledo, president of the Ohio W. C. T. U., branded as incorrect the published statement that the W. C. T. U. "White list" had been altered without her authority. This list, as finally approved and generally distributed, endorsed the candidacies of both Begg and Cooper, as well as Davy and Bloom, Democratic gubernatorial candidates, and other candidates for state offices.

Mrs. Richards was credited with stating that she ordered changes made after it was discovered that the initial "White list," which doubly endorsed a number of candidates, was misunderstood by many W. C. T. U. members. The final approved list accorded equal endorsement to all candidates whose dry records were approved. She stated that W. C. T. U. questionnaires were mailed to all candidates for state and congressional offices.

FIRE LOSS HEAVY

STEBENVILLE, O., Aug. 3.—Damage caused by fire of undetermined origin which swept the Cooper-Kline dry goods store in the business district here late yesterday was estimated at $30,000.

Two women, confused by the dense smoke which billowed upward, were carried out by firemen. Several fire fighters were overcome by the smoke but were revived.

FOUR INDICTED IN MEXICO IN ASSASSINATION OF OBREGON

Toral Counsel Will Plead Insanity For Client; Three Others Sought; Reporters Question Gun User.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 3.—Jose De Leon Toral, Mother Superior Acevedo Concepcion De La Lata of Espinosa Santo Convent, Senora Maria Luisa Pena Altamira, and Jorge Fernando Gallardo Paron, a cousin of Leon Toral, have been indicted in connection with the assassination of President-Elect Alvaro Obregon and it was announced today that the trials would start next week. Leon Toral is the self confessed assassin. The others are accused of complicity.

Warrants have been issued for the arrest of three others. They are:

Manuel Trejo Morales, who is accused of giving Leon Toral the pistol with which Gen. Obregon was shot to death on July 17.

Carlos Castro Balda, who is alleged to have been a confederate of Morales in the planting of bombs in the chamber of deputies building last May.

Padre Jose Jimenez.

It is believed that Leon Toral's counsel will adopt a plea of insanity, a defense that has proved efficacious in so many murder trials in the United States.

Toral's lawyer probably will ask for the appointment of a commission to examine the prisoner. He said that evidence would be introduced along two lines:

1.—To prove that the prisoner is a religious fanatic;

2.—To prove that there was a strain of insanity in his family.

Prosecuting Attorney Juan Correa Nieto said that Leon Toral, the Catholic nun and Gallardo Paron, will be charged with murder when the trial opens.

The Mexican law prohibits the execution of women.

As Leon Toral has already confessed, it is expected that he will be found guilty and will face a firing squad unless his lawyers' insanity plea saves him.

The Mother Superior faces a twenty year term. The other two face ten year sentences as accessories before the fact if found guilty.

Newspaper men were again allowed to question Leon Toral. When asked if he considered himself sane he pondered the question gravely for a few moments then replied:

"I believe so."

The preliminary court inquiry has revealed the presence of a society with headquarters in Villa De Guadalupe, a suburb which is alleged to have been formed for the purpose of assassinating men in power.

REPORT STEAMER SINKING OFF COAST

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—An unidentified five-masted schooner, with twenty-three men aboard, is sinking at East Brother Rock, five miles east of Great Isaac in the Bahama Islands group, the coast guard was advised today by its Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., base.

Immediate assistance is needed. The schooner's distress was reported by the Belgian tanker Mato Caroline.

Headquarters declared coast guard vessels could not be sent to the rescue, first, because there is an agreement for American cutters not to enter British waters as result of the run treaty agreement, and second, because rescue ships from Ft. Lauderdale, the nearest base, are too far away to give effective aid.

PLANE IS REPORTED OVER OCEAN AFTER START FROM PARIS

New York Destination Of Flyers With Weather Favorable

LORIENT, France, Aug. 3.—The Polish flyers Major Louis Idzikowski and Major Casimir Kubala were reported out over the Atlantic at 8:10 a. m. (local time), by the Lorient wireless station.

DREUX, France, Aug. 3.—The "Marzalek Pilsudski," the plane in which the Polish flyers, Major Louis Idzikowski and Major Casimir Kubala, are attempting a trans-Atlantic flight, passed over this city at 6:38 a. m. (1:38 a. m. New York Daylight time) today flying easily and making good time despite its heavy fuel load.

Dreux is about 68 miles west of Paris.

PARIS, Aug. 3.—Undeterred by the news that Capt. Frank T. Courtney and three companions had been forced down on the Atlantic, the Polish flyers, Major Louis Idzikowski and Major Casimir Kubala, hopped off from Le Bourget air field at 5:49 a. m. (12:49 a. m. New York Daylight time) today, on another trans-Atlantic attempt with New York as their ultimate goal.

Burdened by the weight of 1,200 gallons of fuel which the fliers calculated would take them more than 3,500 miles without a stop, the silver grey biplane "Marzalek Pilsudski" taxied more than three-quarters of a mile across the field before it lifted into the air.

Idzikowski was at the controls. A huge crowd which had been waiting at the field for several hours cheered wildly as the plane rose in the air and headed southwest for the coast.

"We may land in New York or anywhere," were Idzikowski's parting words. Before the start the fliers had announced they would head for the Azores, landing there only if additional fuel were needed. If not, they said they intended flying direct to the Bermudas.

Weather conditions for the flight were ideal. Kubala, acting as navigator, said the fliers carried a dozen of a mile across the field before it lifted into the air.

The plane is not cabin-enclosed. Before starting Kubala expressed confidence that he and his companion would land in New York in forty hours as they expected a northeasterly wind behind them most of the way. For provisions, the fliers carried a dozen of a mile across the field before it lifted into the air.

Both aviators have had long experience. During the early part of the war they fought on opposite sides, Idzikowski fighting in the Russian armies and Kubala on the Polish air force when Poland became an independent country.

The plane is not equipped with radio apparatus and therefore will not be heard from directly on its flight. Radio equipment was dispensed with because of the heavy fuel load being carried.

The "Marzalek Pilsudski" is an Amiot metal biplane powered by a 650 horsepower Lorraine Dietrich motor. Its wingspread is 65 feet and cruising speed about 100 miles an hour.

STATION WAUW IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 3.—Broadcasting by WAUW station here will not be halted, it was announced today by officials, regardless of the fact that the transmitting plant was destroyed yesterday by fire at a loss of from $75,000 to $100,000.

WAUW will use the Ohio State University station WEOA, until the burned transmitters can be repaired. Lines from the downtown studio to WAUW to WEOA were being installed today.

Programs from WAUW will be sent out on only 750 watts from WEOA. One wave length has been shared by the two stations, which makes it possible for both to remain on the air.

Installation of a new transmitter will be started as soon as bids can be received, WAUW officials declared.

SERIOUSLY INJURED
TIFPIN, O., Aug. 3.—A student in Heidelberg College, sustained probably fatal injuries today when his overalls caught in a shafting at an elevator at Old Fort. Fry was rushed to Mercy Hospital here where he is undergoing treatment for a crushed chest.

HARDSHIPS MARKED PIONEER BURIAL RITE

Dr. W. A. Galloway, Gives Another Interesting Pioneer Story From His Files Of Unpublished Early Ohio Narratives.

Dr. W. A. Galloway, Xenia, chairman of the historical committee of the Greene County Home-Coming who is arranging an interesting exhibit, is in possession of an original manuscript that tells of the hardships involved in a pioneer funeral, and is part of the literature that enables modern Xenians to picture the conditions under which lived the pioneers who made this city possible.

This story of a pioneer funeral, in the vicinity of Old Chillicothe one hundred years ago, was found among the valuable historical notes of the late Dr. C. M. Galloway.

The pioneer's last service for those he loved was surrounded with limitations and hardships difficult for us to realize in the light of the luxuries of the modern burial service. There were no coffin factories in those days. The carpenter or cabinet maker came for the measurements of the deceased, and built his coffin, according to his size, from strong and selected oak lumber. The deceased was dressed in "his fine suit of clothes", often including white lisle-thread gloves, and reverently placed in this unlined box.

The coffin handles were individual ones. The plain board lid was fastened in place with long screws. One has difficulty, now, in visualizing the family's task of preparing enough food for the large concourse of people—and their horses—that came to the funeral of any prominent citizen.

The deceased of this story was John Townsley, builder of the first log school house in Greene County, Ohio, in 1805. He was a teacher in the school house that he built. The story which follows is unique. The hour of death and the date of the funeral service of the dead pioneer was heralded about the newly settled country among the sturdy settlers who lived in log houses. They traveled over trails and wagon tracks cut out of the virgin forest by men and boys of the period.

A large assemblage, representing a wide range of surrounding country, came at the appointed time to the late home of the deceased. They came on foot, on horse-back and in wagons to pay sincere respect to the deceased, and to comfort the afflicted members of the family.

The following is an account of one pioneer funeral, as given me by my Uncle Robert Kendall, who, as a boy, accompanied his father, who was my grandfather, William Kendall, to this funeral.

It happened in early springtime. There had been a cold rain and sleet for several days. The earth was soaked with water, and the streams were bank full. They mounted their horses in early morning, and rode through the woods until they reached their destination—two miles above Cedarville—nine miles from their home. The mud in places, was one-half knee deep to their horses, and they were wet through and chilled to the bone when they arrived.

There was a long service at the house, and a substantial pioneer lunch was served for all in attendance. Afterwards, the four-horse conestoga wagon with cover was brought out to carry the coffin and the members of the family to the graveyard, nine miles distant.

The wagon also carried axes to cut out fallen trees and limbs that might obstruct the way; a mattock, spades and shovels for digging the grave. Following this wagon, were other covered conestoga four-horse wagons filled with people; the horsemen came after the wagons.

Thus, in the cold rain, the sad procession wended its tedious way to "God's Acre", there to perform its last duty to a citizen, a neighbor, a friend, and a relative.

It was late in the afternoon, after sinking through mud one-half wheel deep, and fording Messies creek that ran into the wagon beds, that they, at length, reached the Stevenson graveyard. The horsemen dismounted, and forming relays, soon finished digging the grave. The body was quickly lowered by straps. A few appropriate remarks were addressed to the mourners and their friends by the preacher, and, after the singing of the twenty-third Psalm and a short prayer, the newly made grave was quickly filled, the wagons quietly faced homeward, retracing their weary way, and the horsemen spurring onward, disappeared in the forest trails.

In this pioneer graveyard of four acres, rest the remains of John Townsley and eight other soldiers of The American Revolution; twenty-four soldiers of the War of 1812; the noted Scotch associate minister, Rev. Robert Armstrong, and many of the pioneer families who first settled central Greene County, following the Treaty of Greenville, in 1795.

The funeral luxury of today, is in striking contrast with the last rites, performed by family, friends and the cabinet maker, for our pioneer ancestors in Greene County.

John Townsley was a notable man in his day. We hope to learn more of his valuable community services, from an exhibit of some of his work, at the Home-Coming historical display. He was a man of wealth, as wealth was counted in those early days; but above all, he was a generous man, with the public good continuously at heart.

Fortunately a record of this funeral has been preserved in good descriptive detail. It is both unusual and unique, in that it is one of the very few pioneer funeral stories to be found in American historical literature.

A Greene County historical society finds ample argument for existence, in many pioneer stories and traditions as yet unrecorded—stories that touch the early and intimate daily life of our country's sturdy first settlers and the redmen who preceded them.

TEN ACRES OF BLACKBERRIES

Berries are big, cultivated, coreless, juicy, tempting, sugary morsels. Perfect dessert, jam, pie and canning berries. Customers said, "My, one and one half bushel lost only one quart in canning. Delicious jam. Kept part of berries five days before finished canning and last just as nice as first canned. Why, wild berries begin to break down and juice run out and fill with sour germs as soon as picked and your cultivated berries hardly stain the container, yet are so tender and sweet. I see now why so many of my wild berries canned, pop up. Your cultivated berries released slightly when can is opened with a slight sprinkling of sugar added, have that fresh from the patch flavor so pleasing and attractive to the taste. Did not know that there was so much difference between wild and your cultivated blackberries. Will never put up another wild berry."

If you do not know the superior qualities and real economy in canning cultivated blackberries order through your Xenia grocer at least one half of your 1928 supply. WOODMANSEE'S BLACKBERRIES, and be convinced, 24 quart crate $4.32—bushel 32 quarts $5.76. Prices uniform all season. Deliveries in and after week of July 23.

Get circular of and order through the following Xenia groceries: Howland, Orient Hill, Arment, Gordin & Gordin, Bull, Kearney Bros., Burtis Grocery Co., Hyman Stores, Xenia Fruit Co., Ross, Liberty Market, Frank Fletcher and Fets Bros.

GLIMPSES OF OHIO HISTORY

He Wrested Ohio From Savage Hands

Of all the expeditions against the Indians during the formative days of Ohio and the Northwest Territory none was more decisive in its ultimate influence upon the country's history than that of George Rogers Clark. Like his famous contemporaries, Boone and Kenton, he was a Kentuckian. During the Revolutionary War he commanded a successful expedition against British strongholds and then turned his energies against the Indians of the Great and Little Miami River Valleys, whose enmity had been inspired against the Americans by the British.

He destroyed many Indian Villages including that of Piqua on the banks of the Mad River five miles from the present site of Springfield.

The backbone of Indian aggression was thus broken, and on the site of the Village of Piqua in the county that bears his name a monument stands to the memory of George Rogers Clark.

As if to signify the perpetuation of peace in the country saved by the famous warrior Smiling Loreco Service is indicated at frequent intervals by the friendly red and white emblem of a great industrial organization.

MANY historians claim that, but for the services of George Rogers Clark during the Revolutionary War, the Northwestern territory would have passed to England or to Spain.

They're Only Hollywood Extras, But They Play Royal Roles

No, you're wrong! The three aristocratic personages above weren't born to the royal purple—they attained it as extras in the movies. They are R. C. Pennell, who doubles in celluloid for His Majesty King George of England;

By SHIRLEY KIRKE
International Illustrated News Staff Writer

NEW YORK.—Here are three celebrities of whom you probably have never heard. They have the features, the characteristics and even the mannerisms of old world royalty; yet they are only extras in life—without kingdoms or great wealth.

Margaret Mann, the sweet-faced Motherly woman pictured above,

Miss Margaret Mann, who is always sent for when a director wishes to portray the late Queen Victoria, and Vaselli Pash, who resembles the late Czar Nicholas of Russia so closely as to amaze hundreds of exiled nobility.

He isn't acting his kingly role he usually is cast as a physician or professor. Britons all over the world write to him, remarking on his amazing resemblance to King George.

The third picture is that of Vaselli Pash and he, too, was an "unknown" until a casting director selected him to enact the role of the late Czar Nicholas in a recent Russian play. He was a sensation, hundreds of former subjects of the Czar gathering on the set to watch his inspired playing of the last of the Romanoffs.

FRED STONE IS PLANE VICTIM

NEW LONDON Conn., Aug. 3.—Fred Stone, noted actor, was hurt today when an airplane in which he was flying went into a tail spin while one hundred feet above ground, and crashed. Stone's daughter, Dorothy, witnessed the accident. Stone was taken to a hospital here for treatment.

Stone was taking a solo flight from the new state aviation field, at Groton, opposite this city when the accident occurred. Stone had been aloft a short time and was returning when suddenly his motor went dead and the machine slipped down.

The accident occurred over a farm lot beyond the landing field and the machine went into that lot instead of into the regular field.

Attendants at the hospital had not determined, early this afternoon, the extent of Stone's injuries. It was understood, however, that both legs were broken and that he received head injuries beside.

READ ETTA KETT DO YOU?

She's The Prophet Of The "Rampant Age" And Here's Her Creator.

PAUL ROBINSON

Say girls, have you seen Etta Kett today? If not, you're denying yourself. Unless you read Etta every day on THE GAZETTE page of comics, you are missing step with all the things that make for snap and verve in the coming generation.

Etta is the supreme exponent of that condition known as "class." She is a prophet of the younger generation, a Joan of Arc of the independent young person who succeeded the flapper.

She speaks a new language—the language of America's youth. And the way she plays with men—say, any girl can take lessons. Etta is a champion of youth also, because she proves that the modern girl can take care of herself in any emergency.

The old-fashioned young woman who sat at home with her "sampers," waited for the men to court her, blushed shyly when love or romance were mentioned, is still sitting safely at home. The girls of the new generation have adopted the same slogan as the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. They "get their man"—and how.

Everyone of the youngsters knows that Etta Kett could give Cleopatra cards and spades and collect more men in a week than Cleo could in a year. And she wouldn't have to poison 'em, either. Furthermore they'd all be good, too, and she'd throw the small fry back in the stream.

But older folks like Etta Kett also. She helps to keep them young, she helps them understand this 1928 youth, and she teaches them tricks about handling their own offspring.

If you're not reading Etta Kett everyday you're going to write Paul Robinson about you. Paul is a Central Press artist who conceived Etta, put her down in black and white and thus preserved her for posterity. Paul is no back-number himself. Look at that wavy

CEDARVILLE GETS $10,000 BEQUEST

A bequest of $10,000 to Cedarville College, by the will of Mrs. Harriet L. Ritchie, New York, was announced in news dispatches from that city Friday.

Dr. W. R. McChesney, president of the college, has received no notification of the bequest, other than that issuing from news associations.

Mrs. Ritchie died June 9 and willed that the Greene County college receive the residue of her estate and it is believed the bequest will amount to more than $10,000.

Mrs. Ritchie has never visited Cedarville College but became interested in the school when she belonged to the Reformed Presbyterian Church in New York.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE FAILURE—He that hath no rule over his own spirit is like a city that is broken down, and without walls.—Prov. 25:28.

SENSIBLE ACTS AND ANSWERS

Lindbergh can do much besides fly. Just recently he did something which seems almost as significant as flying alone from New York to Paris.

Asked for a statement about his feelings when his friend, Carranza, was killed in a flight, Lindbergh said something to this effect:

"Please permit me to keep my feelings to myself."

Say what you will, Lindbergh has something besides the inborn sense of direction which enables him to fly through the dark without technical navigation knowledge. After he flew to Paris and put his wheels right down in the spot he started for, and flew to Mexico and Central America and the West Indies and back, the United States government assigned an expert to teach him navigation, you know. He probably learned little from the expert. But he can lose all the navigators in the world, just flying straight to his objective, without guiding beams or light of sun, moon or stars.

Whenever anybody of consequence dies or there is an earthquake or a tornado or a great national disaster, persons of prominence issue statements, saying they are sorry, grief-stricken, or even shocked.

Lindbergh says, "Please let me keep my feelings to myself."

So here is a young man who dares to tell the world that his personal feelings are none of the world's business. Lindbergh is just beginning to demonstrate his real greatness. Some day he will surprise this peculiar world again.

There are feelings and sentiments and affairs which are properly private, and Lindbergh is the first American notable, so far, who has had the courage coupled with good taste, to say so.

NOISE AND NERVES

Abolition of unnecessary noises is the formidable task taken upon itself by a special committee of the American society of Engineers. The committee will find out just what noises are preventable, what measures to minimize them can be taken and what injurious effect, if any, the noises of this modern bedlam may have upon humanity.

For human beings the tolerance of noise is largely a matter of adaptation. Reptition so accustoms the mind and ear to the rattle and roar of civilization that the individual soon becomes oblivious of their presence. But this acquired unconsciousness does not necessarily mean that health does not suffer or that there is no wear and tear on the nervous system.

Perhaps within a few years municipalities will have noise inspectors, just as they already have smoke inspectors. One lends itself to control no less than the other. There is no community, however small, in which unnecessary noises can not be found, but the larger the city the greater the nuisance and the more room for noise abatement.

It has been suggested that in addition to the many other "weeks" that are supposed to be observed we might add "noiseless week." If this idea is adopted the week on which the Fourth of July comes might be the one selected.

RADIO CLUES

London police catch a man believed to be a Chicago criminal. To avoid detaining him unnecessarily they sent his finger prints to United States by wireless. The police department which receives the wireless can reconstruct the prints speedily from the index letters and figures which are transmitted. Each letter or figure describe a whorl, circle or loop.

This is a clever contribution to justice. If the suspect is innocent, his period of detention will not be stretched out uselessly. And if guilty he will be returned to face his accusers promptly.

BLUE SHIRTS

The medical student is expected to wear a white shirt. It is one of the trademarks. A blue shirt won't do. Of course these artificial restrictions will be discarded eventually. A Van Dyke beard and a white shirt won't add to a doctor's ability. Robert Millikan, cosmic ray scientists and honored by many nations, knows that standardized appearance is absurd. He dresses more like an interesting business man or banker than the college professor of tradition. In action, too, he is mild insurgent. He believes in being friendly with his students. What a relief from the minor intellects who put on airs to impress folk!

VIENNESE POSTGRADUATES

It is startling to learn that surgeons from this country who go to Vienna for their post-graduate training can attend classes taught in English. We don't make it quite so easy for the European who comes here to absorb the commercial methods in which we excel. But through the Viennese smooth the linguistic path for the American visitor, they don't want him to try to earn his way, even in part, through their universities. In Vienna, alone, nearly 250,000 Austrians are out of work.

OUT OF TUNE?

Dr. Robert Bruce Raup, lecturing in California, says the average individual is out of tune with his environments when he gets angry and "flies off the handle." What's left to be said? Nothing much, unless you remark that some environments are sufficient cause for an effective explosion of temper.

COTTON WOMEN

New styles in cotton fabrics are being created by women. Who could it be better? American manufacturers do well to let the style and color developments in new fabrics come from the feminine side of the house.

The Diary of a New Yorker

By CLARK KINNAIRD

NEW YORK, A manufacturer, who is worth $12,000,000, went into a bank and tried to get a check on another bank in the city, for $100, cashed. He had left his purse in his office and needed the funds for some shopping. The teller would not cash the check without identification, and no one in the bank ever had heard of the millionaire. In confusion, the wealthy man retired.

More wealth doesn't make one well known in New York. Gilda Gray, a former entertainer in a saloon, whose claim to fame is her mode and manner of shaking her hips, is mobbed by the curious whenever she appears in public, but J. P. Morgan can walk for blocks on Fifth avenue without being recognized and few persons are even familiar with the name of George Baker, great banker, who is rated as the third richest man in the United States.

Coffee is 75 cents a cup in one tony New York restaurant. But the "java" doesn't taste any different from that you get at the Automat. If there's any difference, it's in favor of the cheaper coffee.

The best coffee to be found anywhere in New York is in all-night cafes patronized by taxi drivers.

Traveling bars no longer are a novelty. The man who first thought of transporting a maggoty counter, brass foot rail, mirrors, nude paintings, shining tumblers and fat bartender with hair parted in the middle, to parties in wealthy homes, got rich out of the idea, and was booked weeks ahead. Now he has so many competitors in the business that he works no more than a day a week, and is thinking of disposing of his equipment.

The suit of a New York store against a business man of $1,094 for clothing purchased by Peggy Hopkins Joyce after the business man told the store to give Miss Joyce "the things she wants and charge them to me," reminds me that a Broadway gold digger told me that men are more liberal with jewelry and such than they are with money. The presents she is able to cajole out of them almost never includes cash, so she has to hock or sell to a second-hand dealer almost every present she gets.

In the above mentioned suit, the items obtained by Peggy Joyce upon her boy friend's credit are listed as: Eight suits, at $33 to $79 each; 41 pairs of hose at from $2 to $15 each; three raincoats, $15 to $30 each; three coats at $120, $135 and $160, and four handkerchiefs at $4.50 each.

The proprietor of ballroom in a less refined section puts on a party for 100 guests, with hula-hula dancers and other entertainers, cocktails, alleged champagne, whiskies, cordials, orchestra, and supper served at tables, for $5,000. He gets lots of business because of the "slum" atmosphere and also because owners of beautiful homes no longer risk injury to them from tipsy guests.

Nothing has any permanence in New York. Once Riverside drive was synonymous with wealth. Now it is one of the streets upon which apartments are most reasonably priced. It has passed as an avenue of luxury, as Madison avenue and Central park west did before it, and as Fifth avenue is passing now.

Deems Taylor says it'll be another year or two before his opera is ready for presentation. Meanwhile the composer of the successful American opera, "The King of the Hensmen," is trying to learn a little more about playing the piano. For he cannot play the piano score of his own music, and his attempts are bad. But he can read a score and he can write one.

Irving Berlin, most successful composer of popular tunes, cannot read music. He picks out his themes on the piano on two fingers or hums them to a transcriber who takes them down and makes a piano arrangement.

Americans are pictured by foreigners as putting speed before everything else. But in New York stores escalators are favored over faster elevators. All of the larger stores are hanging to install more of the moving stairways.

I am imagining an unexpected guest dropping in about the middle of the morning and staying to luncheon. What can we have to eat? Well, we always keep plenty of fresh eggs in the house at this time of the year, and we have a few cans of things on our emergency shelf—tomato soup and such. We also have onions. That makes our main dish, scrambled eggs in Spanish style. Maybe a can of pineapple is also on our shelf, which, with a few fresh berries, left from a previous meal, for garnish, makes the salad which is also the dessert. The beans may be canned, but are preferably fresh.

Today's Recipe
Spanish Scrambled Eggs—Mince a tablespoonful of onion and saute in olive oil until tender, add a cup of tomato puree and heat to the bubbling point, add six eggs and scramble all together, season with salt, pepper and paprika.

THE FIRST CALLER

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

The Early Manufacture of Cosmetics

The first real manufacturers of creams and lotions for lady's toilet were the apothecaries of old. This was well into the medieval era when, with every bit of fact a goodly portion of superstition and witchcraft was well mixed, and the whole blended into a ridiculous and impossible result. In one of my most treasured little books, written by a "lady of the seventeenth century," I find constant allusions to the fact that herbs and flowers will prove valueless unless picked under the waning light of an August moon!

And this is but the least of the fallacies and follies which distinguished the old world beauty lore. But in their dark and damp chemist shops, these old-time quacks grew rich on the profits of their labors. The ladies of the Middle Ages spent thousands on creams and lotions that were purported to preserve their dark and glowing beauty. In France trade was excellent. The sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, there were veritable orgies of extravagance. And strange to say, many of the concoctions were successful!

So much so, that in the early part of the seventeenth century Parliament passed an act warning the ladies of England that if they "inveigled" men into marriage through the wicked use of cosmetics, high heels, carmine, etc., the marriage would promptly be voted null and void. Of course, manufacture developed. The creams that were once boiled and blended in a tiny "bain-marie" are now developed in a sanitary vat—in quantities to fill not one jar or a dozen, but thousands at a time.

In my own factory, I have often seen six or seven girls working busily to prepare the ingredients for a single blend of cream or lotion. That the progress of manufacture during those early middle ages was not so rapid as it should have been was due solely to the gullibility of the populace. Men chose to believe that beauty was magic—either good or evil, and their individual fancies dictated. That age could be stayed and a lovely skin preserved against the inroads of time without the aid of conjuring tricks, was something not even the moderately intelligent person believed. And the shrewd apothecaries, sensible and secure in their own knowledge, played upon the gullibility of the people to their ultimate gain—for the more of the black art a jar of cream contained, the more potent its power, and the higher its cost.

Then the dark age passed, and chemistry dropped the dark cloak of superstition from its shoulders and stood forth as an exact science. With the results that lead us straight to the doors of modern beauty science.

Squints (Strabismus). C. (Squinting or cross-eye (technical name strabismus) is caused by different things; among them paralysis of the nerve in certain of the eye muscles for some reason, such as from some inflammation in the brain, or some trouble in the nerves along their course; from acute poisoning and injuries; acute rheumatism and other infectious diseases, occasionally gonorrhea, and even auto-intoxication may cause it. Occasionally there are structural defects of the muscles which one is born with—congenital cross-eye, in other words. There may also be a paralysis of the eye muscles due to a reflex irritation, so it is possible that the trouble with your teeth may be a cause in your case. C. However, you should see an oculist immediately to determine the cause, before you can expect any relief.

GRAPE SHERBET
(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe.)
To one cup of grape juice add the juice of one orange and a half a lemon. Add sufficient sugar to sweeten well. To a quart of rich milk add one-half cup sugar and freeze as ice cream. When about half frozen add fruit mixture and finish freezing. Garnish with whipped cream. This makes enough to serve 10 or 12.

Food Idiosyncrasies
There are some foods perfectly wholesome to most, that will cause eruptions, and perhaps some other unfavorable symptoms in a few. This also applies to certain medications and other substances. The person so affected is then said to have an idiosyncrasy to that food or substance.

Miss R. evidently has an idiosyncrasy to eggs, and she wants to know if there is any way in which they can be prepared so this could be overcome.

So far as I know, there is no way to prepare eggs of other foods in the usual amounts taken that will overcome the idiosyncrasy to them. It may go away of itself after a while. Occasionally the tolerance to the foods

"Poor Mrs. Elegant Tinsamou! Her troubles were all over now. What a shame she had never learned to go straight! If she had, she need not have lain there on the ground, wounded! What a good looking bird Mrs. Tinsamou was! How her poor mate would miss her! How sad that the eggs she had laid would never hatch because no longer would a loving mother hover over them, keep them warm, protect them from danger!"

"As we Bobolinks were mourning over Mrs. Tinsamou we heard a sound. Looking up quickly we spied the man on horseback. He was coming our way. Unlucky Mrs. Tinsamou had warned us not to be caught by her side lest something dreadful happen to us. But curiosity was almost as strong as fear. What was the man going to do? What was he coming back for? We determined not to fly out of sight until we found out, but we had no notion to stay within his arm's reach. So up into the air we rose and hovered high over the head of the human on horseback. "Can you guess what that man did? No? Well, he picked up poor Mrs. Tinsamou and opened a big black bag that hung in his saddle. The next thing he Deodorants.

Miss S. A good formula for removing excessive perspiration and bad odor of the feet is one ounce of formalin to the quart of water. Pat a little of the solution on after first washing and drying. Do this every day for a week, then twice a week.

A 25 cent solution of aluminum chloride is especially good for under the arms. This is applied the same way as the formalin.

FEATURES

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—A political orator, in these days of radio broadcasting, in one respect is at a big advantage over the orator of yore, whose range, per speech, was limited to a roomful.

Now he addresses millions in the same length of time that it used to take his predecessor to address hundreds. However, the up-to-date spell-binder has to have a lot more speeches. The old-timer could write one good one and keep on delivering it over and over again. It made no difference to the Podunk electorate that the good folk of Four Corners had heard the same thing the night before and the voters at Hickville were equally thrilled by the same line of eloquence 24 hours later.

Today a speech once spoken has been listened to by everybody, and an entirely new article is demanded.

When a candidate of this present year of grace announces his purpose to limit himself to a dozen or fifteen speeches during his campaign, at first thought it seems as if he meant to be rather too economical with them. Why, shucks!—that is 12 or 15 times as many as a candidate of two decades ago considered necessary.

The latter merely repeated his. Twelve or 15 is an extraordinary number. On due reflection it is hard to see how one man can think up so many. The better part of an unabridged dictionary can be talked into 12 or 15 speeches.

By good rights each speech in a campaign of today ought to deal with a distinct issue.

There are not that many national issues of importance. Prosperity, economy, agriculture, power, prohibition, corruption, foreign affairs, national defense and the list about exhausts since the parties are practical at one on the tariff and religion is no recognized.

There would not be that many if the rival candidates had provided some issues of their own. The farmers of the two platforms tried to avoid furnishing any.

Turn out 15 penny separate speeches between now and November is enough to strain any candidate's imagination.

Authorities also are all agreed that a speech must mean a great deal more to hold a radio audience than was required to make a hit in the 1800's and earlier.

A crowd creates its own enthusiasm. What the speaker of yesterday had to say did not particularly matter, provided he made the eagle scream and the wind rattle and the chandeliers vibrate. People thought it was great stuff because a lot of them were gathered together, and they hypnotized one another.

Nobody has any idea that such action is obtainable from the householder who sits calm down in his own parlor to listen, with only the wife and youngster or two anywhere in the immediate vicinity.

Managers say a candidate certainly is saved a good deal in the way of physical wear and tear through escape from the ordeals of racing madly around the country, shouting his head off every whistling post.

They are not sure this is a largely offset by the additional demands made on his gray matter.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

AFRAID SHE'LL LOSE HIM

The way some girls write in and ask—really plead—for advice on how to get their boy friends back, or how to keep them, although they are not worth keeping, you would think that boy friends are the most precious things in the world and that if you lose one you would never get another. Generally speaking, the least attractive girls have more than one boy friend in their lives, and one can get along without one, you know, and still have lots of fun. Of course I admit that they are desirable, and most girls want to get married some time, but usually the way to lose them is to hold on too tight, and a desire of independence now and then is rebuffed by the best of men. Try it, girls.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I have a new friend whom I admire very much, but when I can't hold him he insists on putting me down. I do not care for him. When I do not do what he insists on doing he calls me 'prowled' and Mrs. Lee, I do not want to give him up, so can't you tell me how to break his habit but still hold his love?" "MARGARET"

Your body is your own. Margaret, if you don't want to be mauled by every Tom, Dick and Harry, you have a perfect right to say so. And if the young man feels he can't enjoy your company without said mauling, let him go, say I. There are young men, you know, who can have good time with a jolly girl and respect her feelings in this matter.

"My Dear Mrs. Lee: I have read your advice and find it very interesting, and now I am asking for some also. I am 17. I have been going out with a young man, aged 23, for a year and nine months. He is a very nice fellow, more than once that he really loved me. He had a sweetheart in Wisconsin and she came back for a week to visit, and she continually called him up. She knew that we were going together. He made a date with her to see her at her girl friend's house, and the same evening he made the date with her in front of me. We had an argument about her and he told me I shouldn't be narrow-minded. That he only wanted to see her once before she went back. Now, here's my really love me or does he still care for her? Should I let him go and go with others myself? WORRIED FRANCES"

Why not be broadminded, Frances, and make no objection to his seeing his former friend? You see she may have thought you took him from her. If you can't hold him by objecting to his seeing her, and it probably is true just as he says, that he cares for her merely as a friend. Anyhow, as she goes away soon you will have all the advantage of being on the spot and can afford to be generous.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a young girl of 19 and am in love with a young fellow of the same age. I haven't heard from him for some three or four weeks. He told me that he thought I was a very respectable girl and that he thought quite a bit of me. Now, Mrs. Lee, I do not have very many friends of either sex. I get so lonesome staying home every night. I feel as though I am being cheated of something when I see other girls going out with their beaux all the time. Mrs. Lee, what is wrong with me? I have a date with a fellow once or twice and they say they will come back again, but they never do. I do not drink or smoke, but I do indulge in some petting, but always draw the line when they go too far. Mrs. Lee, how can I win this fellow and how can I become more popular?"

Maybe you are too anxious, and the boys won't be chased, you know. Be jolly and sympathetic and interested in them and their doings. The same recipe will win girl friends. If you can, try change of location for awhile.

This way! Isn't he behaving queerly? What's he doing? Let's fly over and ask him! Next—"Turning Stones" for Living."

"What do you say, wife?" asked I. "Shall we set out on the golden way?" The sun is still high and we shall have still far before the last rays have faded. Then the moon will rise and its silver beams will light up our journey? But wife shook her head.

"I want to go home as much as you do," said she. "But I am too tired to start tonight. How beautiful it is, and how quiet. Let's camp here for the night. After all we may never come this way again and there's no use hurrying. Husband, look! Whom do I see? A bird! He walks

Indiana Horse Takes Harness Cup; The Belmont Wins 2:14 Trot Event After Trotting First Heat In 2:10 3-4.

By PHIL FRAME

Lafayette, owned and driven by W. H. Marvin, LaFayette, Ind., won the three-year-old and under pace, a $500 stake race, feature event on Thursday's Southwestern Ohio Shortstart Circuit program at the Greene County Fair, winning the first and fourth heats over a field of eleven starters, after having finished second in the second heat and fourth in the third.

The winning owner was also presented with a loving cup by Harness Cigar Store, this city.

In winning the first heat in the fast time of 2:09 3/4, LaFayette made the best time of the afternoon. Abbe Guy won the second heat in a nose finish and Queen Abbe the third, requiring an extra heat to determine the winner of the race.

In the fourth heat, LaFayette won with something to spare as the other two heat winners broke badly.

The 2:22 trot, also a four-heat event, was won by Stella Dillon, owned by E. A. Boslen, Chattanooga, Tenn., and driven by Russell, taking the first and fourth heats after finishing third in the second and third brushes.

Stella Dillon won the first heat in 2:12 3/4, Ruth M. the second in 2:14 3/4, Bellwether, a rank outsider the third in 2:15 3/4. The deciding heat was won by Stella Dillon, who defeated the other heat winners, the race was worth $300 and was the Xenia Man Highly Indorse New Medicine After It Completely Restored His Health.

The steady stream of voluntary reports from former sufferers of stomach, liver, kidney and bowel troubles or rheumatism and neuritis prove conclusively the unusual merit of this new Konjola medicine. Surprising statements are received every day by the Konjola Man at the Gallaher Drug Store, Xenia, where he is explaining the merits of this medicine to large crowds daily. One of the latest to tell about the benefits received through the use of this medicine is Mr. William Wright, Route No. 4, Xenia.

"I believe that I am doing right by telling others about the splendid merits of Konjola," said Mr. Wright. "This medicine has restored my health by banishing a severe case of stomach trouble and nervousness."

"I really hated to see night approaching because I knew that when I went to bed it would be several hours before I could get to sleep. As soon as I got in bed I would begin to roll and toss and then when I did get to sleep by the time I got up the next morning I felt as if I had not been to bed at all. I was told this condition came from my nerves which were in terrible shape. Besides this trouble my stomach was also very disordered. Everything that I ate fermented gas that bloated me terribly. A hot sour liquid rose into my mouth that burned like fire. I became terribly short of breath and the least exertion wore me out. I really had to be very careful when I ate. As this had been my condition for some time I began to think I would never be well again and consequently I was very discouraged."

"But one day I heard about the amazing work of Konjola and so I decided to give this medicine a trial. It is a blessing that I did because right from the start it helped me and I soon knew that I would be completely relieved of all my health troubles. Day by day my nerves became stronger and by the time I had completed the treatment I was able to sleep through the entire night. It seems to me that I fall asleep the minute my head touches the pillow and when I get up the next morning I feel greatly refreshed and full of energy. Konjola also regulated my stomach organs so that I can eat whatever is placed before me without the re-occurrence of a single stomach symptom. The gas bloating is ended and I never belch up that sour liquid as I formerly did. Since my stomach is in good condition my heart does not act in a peculiar manner and I am never short of breath. In every way this medicine has benefited me and I am only too glad to recommend and indorse it to others."

The Konjola Man is at the Gallaher Drug Store, Xenia, where he is daily meeting the public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy. Free samples given.

MRS. MOLLA MALLORY

Mrs. Franklin I. (Molla) Russell, daughter of the American national tennis champion and a net player of international note, is of Norse descent.

As Miss Russell, the daughter of the Vikings, she won the American crown for 1915, 1916 and 1918. She also ruled as tennis queen after the famous Patriotic tournament, in 1917.

After her marriage Mrs. Mallory won the title in 1920, 1921 and 1922, when her great reign was ended by Helen Wills. Mrs. Mallory came back in 1926 and won her eighth title.

NOTES OF THE RACES

Early indications were that the program would be marred by rain. It began to rain after the third heat had been completed but soon stopped and the afternoon turned out to be perfect for racing. The track was fast.

William Haston, Eaton, one of the three judges, was unable to be present Thursday and his place was taken by Harry McFeeley, Osborn, who has served as judge at the county fair here in past years.

With the afternoon card marked by two four-heat events, making eleven heats in all, it took about three and one-half hours to complete the program. The grandstand was completely filled.

United States Senator Simon D. Fess, now at his home in Yellow Springs, spent the entire day at the fair, following his annual custom, and was a guest at the judges' stand. He was an interested spectator.

Fess was keynote at the Republican National Convention at Kansas City and in this capacity will formally notify Herbert Hoover, the Republican presidential candidate, of his nomination this month. Fess has been at home working on some matters for the national committee and on the notification speech, which he announces has been completed.

LaFayette, owned by W. H. Marvin, LaFayette, Ind., finished third in 2:06 3/4 at Toledo and fourth at Kalamazoo, Mich., in 2:04 1/4, several weeks ago. LaFayette had a record of 2:09 3/4 last year as a two-year-old colt.

In the second heat of the colt stake race, Queen Abbe, owned by H. M. Marshall, Urbana, finished second but was finally set back to fifth place outside the money by the judges after protests were made the colt was allowed to run instead of pace in the stretch. Abbe Guy won the heat. LaFayette, which finished third, was placed second from fourth to third and Demas Harvester from fifth to fourth.

Fans registered disappointment when Missing Wonder, owned by William Irwin, Lebanon, and trained by Joe Hagler, Xenia, which had been nominated for the 2:14 trot Thursday, was scratched. Missing Wonder cleaned up every thing in sight in his class last year but has suffered a recurrence of his former tendency to "jump" this season and has refused to train properly.

The Xenia Municipal Band entertained fair patrons with music between heats of the races Thursday.

Ritticisms BY BILL RITT

The office stenog's old man has a new straw hat. But the only way you can tell it is because it's clean.

His last hay helmet almost became a family heirloom. When he threw it away there was nothing left but the sweatband.

He looked like a tramp in his old grass derby, but the new one will get him a job on any vaudeville circuit.

If he had four more ounces of brains the lidpiece would be only twice too large.

It has a nice quiet band like the American flag. When he crosses a street, traffic comes to a standstill.

When he brought it home the neighbor's children rushed out to see the elephants. They thought a circus was in town.

His family is thankful for one thing. Summer is only three months long.

JAMESTOWN TEAM WINS ANNUAL FAIR QUOT TOURNAMENT

Merritt And Soddors Total 181 Points To Win Title

Representing Jamestown, Merritt and Soddors won the annual inter-city quito tournament at the Greene County Fair by scoring an aggregate of 181 points over the today period. The tourney ended Thursday.

Wagner and Devoe placed second with a total of 170; Vannorsdall and Gannon third with 125, and Hughes and Peele fourth with 120. First prize is $12.50; second, $7.50, and third, $5.

Soddors was high-scorer of the tournament with ninety-three points for three matches, followed by Wagner with eighty-nine and Merritt with eighty-eight.

In tourney matches played Thursday, Merritt and Soddors won three straight from Gannon and Vannorsdall, while Wagner and Devoe took three in a row from Hughes and Peele. Vannorsdall and Gannon defeated Peele and Hughes two out of three games.

COUNTY BUDGET FOR 1929 ASKS $266,000 IN APPROPRIATIONS

Greene County's budget for 1929, on file with County Auditor R. O. Wead, calls for $266,000 for next year and is identical in most respects with the appropriations sought for 1928.

The budget, as approved by County Commissioners, seeks $212,000 inside the fifteen-mill limitation, including $148,000 in the general county fund; $54,000 for the interest and sinking fund and $10,000 for the county road and bridge fund.

The budget statement shows that receipts for 1927 amounted to $177,872.71 and that for 1928, based on actual receipts, the first six months and estimated the last six months, the figure is $196,190.04. Expenditures in 1927 totaled $160,984.11 and in 1928, $183,881, leaving a balance last December 31 of $12,309.04.

Auditor Wead announces that the 1929 budget request of every taxing district in the county is now on file.

The County Budget Commission will hold its annual organization meeting next Monday morning, prior to beginning consideration of the budgets.

CHAUTAUQUA WILL BE ON FLYNN LOT

The Redpath Chautauqua tent will be located on Detroit Blvd., on the Flynn lot, instead of on the site of old Central High School, it was announced Friday.

The sale of the Chautauqua tickets is making good progress, Mrs. Walter Dean says. John Dean, of the Redpath Co., will be in Xenia Saturday to arrange the program.

ROSS TOWNSHIP

Mrs. William Klontz was called to Dayton Sunday on account of the illness of her granddaughter Anna Louise Jones.

Mrs. William Stittsworth and son Harry attended the Bland reunion at Milford Center last Sunday.

Miss Mary Frances Klontz returned to St. Joseph, Mo., Friday after spending her vacation with her parents, Mr. Edwin Klontz and family.

Mrs. William Sheely and son, George visited friends at Seven Caves near Bainbridge last Sunday.

Mr. McKnight and family of Iowa, are visiting relatives here. Mrs. McKnight was Miss Mary Buck before her marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Brakefield are moving to Springfield this week.

Several from here attended the funeral of Miss Helen Flax near South Solon last week. They were former residents here.

Miss Helen Flax, 22, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Flax, near South Solon, died in Grant Hospital, Columbus, Tuesday following an operation for appendicitis performed last Sunday.

She was a graduate of the South Solon High School, and leaves besides her parents three brothers and one sister: Harold, Eugene and Russell Flax and Miss Lucile Flax, all at home.

Funeral services were held Thursday at 2 p. m. in the residence near South Solon with interment in the family plot in Kirkwood cemetery.

Broadway Hostesses---and Their Nemesis

Somehow Helen Morgan (left) and Texas Guinan, rival night club hostesses, always managed to get the better of any argument with a mere male over the prohibition question. But when a woman took the trail it was a different story. Mrs. Mabel W. Willebrandt

(center), assistant attorney-general in charge of dry violation cases, promptly caused these two shining lights of the Gay White Way to be indicted and announced she will press their prosecution

SEEK RELATIVES OF WOMAN AFTER DEATH

Miss Julia Williams, 69, colored, died at the Dayton State Hospital Friday morning, according to information received here. Hospital records show she was committed from Xenia January 29, 1929, and had been an inmate of the institution since that time. J. E. Watts, probation officer, is attempting to locate relatives of Miss Williams before arrangements for burial are made. Old residents Friday had failed to help him and anyone having information concerning the woman's family is asked to communicate with Mr. Watts.

BANDIT CAUGHT

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 3.—When two bandits were forced to abandon their automobile after robbing a local gasoline station of $50, police arrested Francis Roll, 29, as one of the holdup men. Roll told police today he did not know the name of his companion, but that he held the gun while the other man scooped up the cash.

TWO KILLED WHEN AUTO HITS FREIGHT

TOLEDO, O., Aug. 3.—Two men were killed and a third slightly injured early today when the light roadster in which they were riding crashed into a moving Nickel Plate freight train at the terminal crossing on Woodville Road here.

While neither of the dead men has been positively identified they are believed to be Ollie Hudson, 22, and Russell Buford, both of Toledo. The latter was said to have been driving the roadster when the tragedy occurred.

Wilbur Sowers, 20, also of Toledo, is in Mercy Hospital here suffering from a severed artery and slight lacerations sustained in the crash.

CHILDREN HURT

URBANA, O., Aug. 3.—When an automobile overturned near North Lewisburg three children were hurt, two of whom were in the hospital today. They were Dorothy Hudson, 14, and Paul Harmon, 6. The other child Georgia Harmon, 7, was taken home. Four others in the car suffered only from shock.

Creamed Comments On S.S. Lesson

At the close of a successful missionary journey there arose in the church at Antioch a controversy as to long established rites that were being discarded; the sincerity of both sides made possible a satisfactory settlement by means of a council at Jerusalem consisting of the recognized church leaders.

V. 1. "And certain men came down from Judea and taught the brethren saying, except ye be circumcised after the custom of Moses, ye can not be saved." Circumcision had come to stand for purity, freedom and holiness and from vileness such as found in other religions. There was historical soundness in this view but there was a failure to see that the same ends could be gained by the ways of Christian liberty and brotherhood.

V. 3. "They passed through both Phenicia and Samaria, declaring the conversion of the Gentiles; and they caused great joy unto all the brethren." Paul and Barnabas were selected as representatives of the new program of Christian liberty and they went to the Jerusalem council they reported the success of the gospel in the first missionary journey, which was hailed with joy. One way of testing our religion is to note our emotions when we hear of the success of the gospel.

V. 4. "And when they were come to Jerusalem, they were received of the church and the apostles and the elders, and they read the things that God had done with them." They touched lightly upon their hardships, or their heroism; they made much of divine protection, deliverances from peril, the repentance that followed their preaching and the faithfulness of the new converts.

Vs. 5, 6. "But there rose certain of the sects of the Pharisees who believed, saying, it is needful to circumcise them, and to charge them to keep the law of Moses. And the apostles and elders came together to consider of this matter." Differences of opinion speedily lead to great schisms unless the men on both sides meet and talk things over fully, frankly; no man is put down who speaks upon a question sincerely; every man who does not speak intelligently and sincerely will put himself down.

Vs. 7, 8. "Peter rose up and said, brethren ye know that a good while ago God made choice among you that my mouth the Gentiles should hear the word of the gospel and believe. And God, who knoweth the heart, bare them witness, giving them the Holy Spirit, even as he did unto us." Peter spoke out of his former experience as a pioneer in making Gentile converts who gave every evidence of being genuine since they were honored in that God gave them the Holy Spirit.

Vs. 10, 11. "Now therefore, why make ye trial of God that ye should put a yoke upon the neck of the disciples which neither our fathers nor we are able to bear? But we believe that we shall be saved through the grace of the Lord Jesus, in like manner as they." Certain rules and regulations are necessary for righteous living but when carried too far, they become a burden. Peter's conclusion is a strong affirmation of the universality of Christian freedom and of the liberty of grace.

It is estimated that there are 150,000 children now enrolled in classes for week-day religious instruction. Approximately 1000 cities and towns have made provision for supplementing the Sunday School instruction in this way, showing an increasing co-operation between denominations as well as with the public schools.

Discussion on S.S. Lesson

1. What is Christian liberty? What are the limitations of Christian liberty?

2. What are the dangers connected with religious controversy?

3. Of what value are conferences in settling disputes?

4. What were the principles that evidently were applied in the council meeting in this lesson?

5. What compromises were made in the settlement of this dispute? How far should compromises enter in the settling of disputes?

6. What are the advantages and the disadvantages of an open forum?

Clericus says—"Controversy heats the blood and intensifies points of opposition, but conferences cool passion and emphasize points of agreement. In all our differences we should strive to come together to consider the matter."

Lesson Prayer, "O God, we thank Thee for freedom in Christ; help us to acknowledge the limitations of freedom that we may keep within the bounds of Christian liberty and build together a Christian brotherhood."

World Religious News

A Methodist Episcopal Church in San Francisco is planning to erect a skyscraper church building. Part of the building will be made into a hotel with five hundred rooms.

Word has been received by the Federal Council of Churches that plans are being made to hold an International Christian Press Conference and Exhibit in Cologne, Germany, August 16-22. The date immediately precedes the Prague Conference of the World Alliance for Promoting International Friendship through the churches.

A petition to the pope signed by thirty-three cardinals and 560 bishops requests him to give his consent and blessing to the new "Feast of Christ the Worker." The aim of such a festival is to stress the dignity of labor by the example of the carpenter of Nazareth and to show to the laboring classes that the church is in sympathy with labor.

A World Youth Peace Congress will be held in Berne, Holland, August 17-26, for the purpose of studying the abstract causes of war and to endeavor to arouse the youth of the world to action in dealing with war elimination. Five hundred delegates are expected, 350 from Europe, 100 from the Americas and fifty from Asia, Africa and Australia. Eighty will go from the United States.

1. WHAT PART SHOULD THE PASTOR HAVE IN SUNDAY SCHOOL? The minister should have a large place in the activities of the Sunday School. This does not mean necessarily that he should teach a class regularly. He ought certainly keep in close touch with the weekly training class. He should sometimes lead the worship services of the different departments. He needs to have a large part in teachers' conferences and especially in the workers' conferences. His pastoral visiting should function wherever possible into the work of the Sunday School. He should be a member of the committee on religious education and while not necessarily a professional, he is a general practitioner and as such has good counsel.

2. WHAT IS THE NEED OF A COMMITTEE ON RELIGIOUS EDUCATION AND HOW IS IT COMPOSED?

The modern Sunday School is so differently organized and offers unusual opportunity for the church to serve childhood and youth that the work calls for increased consideration; hence a special committee popularly called the committee on religious education. It consists of the minister, the general superintendent, departmental superintendents, the secretary-treasurer, the director of religious education and the presidents of all educational organizations of the church with some helpful members at large. It should be responsible for the educational policies and the program of religious education of the church.

DECAY OF TALENT UNUSED.

In one of the places in the city of Genoa, there is a glass case very carefully guarded. It contains a violin used by the great violinist Paganini. The violin was bequeathed to the city of Genoa, on condition that it should never be used again.

It has been preserved since then as the greatest treasure of the city. But the violin is perishing and sometime will fall to pieces. When it was used and the touch of the bow kept in vibration, it was safe. Now that it is perfectly still, it is attacked by insects which are destroying the wood.

Under the hand of its master, it gave forth the most wonderful music a violin has ever produced. Now it is silent and useless.

What is true of this violin is true of talents and capabilities; if they are not used they will decay and be lost.—D. Carl Yoder.

THE BETTER WAY

THE WORLD COURT AGAIN.

"The belief is growing that the question of American membership in the Permanent Court of International Justice may again become a vital public issue. The Senate on January 27th, 1926 by a vote of its members gave its advice and consent to the adherence of the United States to the World Court. As is well known, the Geneva Conference of Signatory States declared its inability to accept without modification the fourth and fifth reservations laid down by the Senate in its vote of adherence. These states, however, in transmitting their reply, referred to 'such exchange of views as the government of the United States may think useful.'"

No such exchange of views has been considered. The Court has been neglected not only by its enemies but by its friends. Two years ago, enthusiasm for this cause was at white heat. Church assemblies were passing resolutions in favor of America's entrance into the court. Little has been heard regarding this issue in recent months.

Signs are now in evidence that an increasing number of Americans are unwilling to have this important issue shelved. Sen. Gillett's resolution suggesting to the President "the advisability of further exchange of views with the signatory states in order to establish whether the differences between the United States and the signatory states can be satisfactorily adjusted" will be widely welcomed throughout the country. The Church at large, it is hoped, will take cognizance of this renewed interest in the World Court question.

A SACRED MEMORY

Rev. Fred Smith says "There were times, doubtless, when my young spirit rebelled against going to morning church service but the significant thing is that I can not now recall them."

"The thing I remember is the fragrant memory of sitting with Dad in the family pew. He believed in church-going. He could sing on occasion. I did not particularly listen for this then. But it is significant that I remember now."

The influence for good in years to come follows church attendance. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?—D. Carl Yoder.

Charging "male governors" have made a sorry "mess of things," Mrs. Edith M. MacFadden of Cambridge has announced her candidacy for governor of Massachusetts on the Republican ticket. She promises efficiency in office if elected.

INDUSTRIAL USE OF WASTE ADVANCED AS RELIEF FOR FARMERS

Relief of agriculture by elimination of farm waste through development of by-products, was urged by H. E. Rice, Xenia, unopposed candidate for the Democratic nomination for congress from the seventh district, when he opened his campaign at a party dinner given by Ex-Congressman Matt Denver at the General Denver Hotel, Wilmington, Thursday.

Rice said the McNary-Haugen bill is "a will of the wisp that lures into dangerous bogs" and claimed that collapse of a similar structure in Argentina in 1922 rocked the entire financial world. Application of industrial policies to farm products is the remedy he urges for farm conditions. "It is now possible," said Rice, "through the activities of chemists, to get about 300 waste products out of corn stalks, straw and chaff. From corn stalks are now made cellulose, wall board, rayon silk, celluloid films, various other commodities. Corn now yields sugar in large quantities and wood alcohol, with its great power possibilities, may be made out of nearly everything that grows. The Iowa State College at Ames has led in showing the possibilities of profit in millions of tons of waste. The scientific work has culminated in the erection of a great factory at Danville, Ill., where waste is now converted into huge profits."

Rice suggested government co-operation in building similar factories in agricultural sections to make use of the waste products from farms, thus increasing the number of factory employees and increasing the farmer's income from 40 to 100 per cent by making use of his by-products.

READ THIS FIRST:

Janet Mary James, eighteen, sweet and clever and good, has an ambition to go on the stage because her mother, who died the night she was born, had been a famous opera star. In New York Janet meets Dr. Ballard Riley, who is known as a woman hater. Ballard dates her up, and Janet gets a lot of fun out of having a date with him. Janet meets Flavia Marlowe, Sir Henry Martindale and "Putty" Bigelow, Flavia, about fifty years old, is beginning to wrinkle and trying to hide it. She is wealthy, and has a studio in the Village. Flavia persuades Janet to lease a studio. It is Janet's first evening in her new home, and she is entertaining Flavia and her friends. Later there is a knock at the door, and Ballard Riley steps in.

In Flavia's words, Ballard threw a wet blanket on the party the minute he came in. After the guests depart, Ballard lectures Janet for taking up with the Villagers. "Putty" Bigelow, boy friend of Flavia, makes an unexpected call on Janet. He grabs Janet around the waist and lifts her up, attempting to kiss her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XV.

Janet giggled out of his arms and he stood back and laughed at her.

"Honest, Angel, I don't think you're glad to see papa! But wait till you see the nice bottle he brought you."

He pulled a bottle of gin from under his coat and started for the kitchenette.

"We're going to have a nice little snifter, Angel."

"Thank you, I had quite enough last night. Keep it for yourself, Mr. Bigelow."

"Mister Bigelow! Oh, I've been promoted, have I?" Janet didn't answer, but walked away and sat on the piano bench. Putty went into the kitchen, and she heard him cracking ice. She wanted him to leave—his presence was more than annoying. But how to get him out was a question soon to be solved in a most unpleasant manner.

Putty had no more than brought the cocktails in and sat down on the bench beside Janet than there was a knock on the door and Flavia walked in. She stood rooted to the floor and her face went white.

Janet looked at her in utter amazement. Why should Flavia look like that? She found her voice and ran over to her.

"Oh, hello, Flavia, I thought you'd be here soon!"

Flavia raised her hand and pushed Janet away. Her voice was hard, and her eyes glinted.

"Oh, you didn't expect me quite so soon, I guess. I'm sorry I interrupted your little tete-a-tete."

Janet looked at Putty, and there was scorn in her eyes.

"Well, Putty, you see what you've done. You know you had no business coming here without Flavia."

Flavia's answer was a short, hysterical laugh.

"Oh, that's priceless! Blame it on Putty. I suppose this wasn't prearranged, of course. Just a sort of stop-off social call on his way to my place."

Janet was too hurt to be angry. She looked from Flavia to Putty, imploringly. He picked up his hat and sauntered out. Insolently, Flavia turned, and her face was twisted with anger.

"I've never done anything for anyone in my life, and had a square deal from them. The more I do the more certain they are to stab me in the back. I see you are no exception—after all I've done for you!"

Her parting shot was the worst. It took Janet's breath when Flavia turned at the door.

"But what can one expect when one picks up a little nobody. You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear."

Janet's reaction was purely one of hurt. There was no anger in her feeling toward Flavia. She remembered all the nice, kind things she had done. Over and over she said to herself:

"She must have been feeling badly about it to say all those terrible things to me."

Janet tried to put herself in Flavia's position. Tried to imagine herself getting old like Flavia—and her pity was strengthened. She had never reconciled herself to Flavia playing around with a boy half her age, but told herself that was none of her business. If she could get away with it, more power to her! There was a great deal of charity in Janet's make-up.

As for Putty, she hoped, that some day she would have a chance to tell him what a rotter he really was. Oh, no! He wouldn't take the blame and tell Flavia he dropped in and surprised her. He wasn't man enough. He would just keep silent, kiss her a few times, and everything would be all right as far as he was concerned.

But Janet was wrong in her last analysis. Putty was tired of Flavia. Janet, in her youth and beauty, had stirred in him emotions of which the passe Flavia was incapable of awakening. Outside, he turned, bowed very low over Flavia's hand sarcastically, and walked off down the street.

Flavia burst into tears, hailed a cab and went home. Putty went to the drug store on the corner and called a girl he hadn't seen for six months. She welcomed him back with open arms and a full cellar.

Janet was deep in thought and blue as indigo when Ballard Riley telephoned.

"Oh, thank goodness, you called. I'm down in the dumps something fierce."

"That's too bad—hangover, I suppose."

"Oh, no; just me fatal beauty. I've gone and vamped an old lady's boy friend—or she thinks I've robbed her cradle, rather. There was a stormy session here about an hour ago."

"Well, I'm not surprised. Hope you haven't had dinner."

"No. Us gals never eat until we can't hold out any longer."

"All right, gold digger. See you in about half an hour."

Janet hung up, her heart singing. She took a whirl around the room. Now what to wear? She decided on the white organdie dress that Ballard had never seen. And the little drooping lace hat.

Ballard Riley prided himself upon his indifference toward women. He had been too busy making good to think much about them. He had been a sort of here today and gone tomorrow fellow. His affairs were few and far between. Women threw themselves at him and he had decided they were more or less all alike.

Janet was so pretty and interesting he felt a deep interest in her. He thought it was because he was interested in seeing her get the right start. Too bad if a kid like that made a fool of herself when she had so much charm and ability. He was thinking about all this on his way to the Village.

When she opened the door in the plain little organdie with the black hair wound in a halo around her head, framing her cameo face, Ballard Riley gasped. It was with difficulty that he shook hands with her and stepped inside. His first impulse was to take her in his arms. He had never wanted to hold anyone so much in his life. The impulse came over him in a wave of emotion.

Janet's thoughts were the same. She wondered if he would hold her—and hoped that he would kiss her. That she wanted him to take her in his arms embarrassed her. Both made a conscious effort to hide their feelings. Janet broke the suspense.

"Well, my 'Bed Time Story Knight,' I slept very well, thank you."

The Theater

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Broadway shows for the smaller cities and towns of the country, with the original casts is the latest plan of theatrical producers. In the flesh and blood? Hardly. It's to be by the talking motion picture and virtually means the end of the theatrical touring companies.

Plans practically completed by the H. Woods, the Shuberts, William A. Brady and Arthur Hammerstein will confine the activities of the stars of the theatrical world to cities like New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and Detroit but a reproduction of their performances by the "talkies" will be available to cities, large and small, everywhere.

The producers mentioned have obtained control of the Vocalium Corporation of America with offices and studios in New York, and are expecting to begin making mechanical reproductions of their current theatrical successes in about six weeks, using the original cast.

The early Woods production of this season, "Jealousy", with Fay Bayner and Glenn Hunter as its stars is expected to be one of the first plays presented. Others to follow in rapid order are "Fast Life", "A Man With Red Hair", an English play and a production in which Florence Reed will star. Several Shubert musical shows will follow in an effort to build up an extensive program for the smaller cities so that theatrical owners will be induced to install the Vocalium process which is said to cost only about $3,500 and is much cheaper than other similar processes.

Plays may be recorded in the theater in which they are being produced, the time required being about two weeks.

A SONG THE GRASS SINGS

THE violet is much too shy,
The rose too little so;
I think I'll ask the buttercup
If I may be her beau.

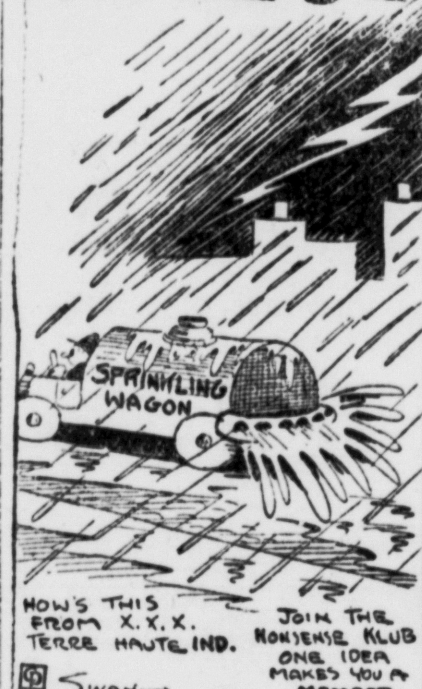

When winds go by, I'll nod to her
And she will nod to me,
And I will kiss her on the cheek
As gently as may be.

And when the mower cuts us
down,
Together we will pass,
I smiling at the buttercup,
She smiling at the grass.

POLITICAL MILLS GRINDING

Candidates Working Feverishly To Inspire Interest In Coming Primary

The Greene County Fairgrounds was infested with politicians this week as office-seekers put the finishing touches on their campaigns before the primary August 14. Fair visitors were but-tholed right and left by the ambitious gentry passing out cards and urging that the "X" mark be put in the proper place on the ballots.

Myers R. Cooper, Cincinnati business man, who was the Republican standard-bearer in the gubernatorial race two years ago, seems to be a "man without a country" as far as local politics are concerned. Little seems to be done here in behalf of Cooper, who visited Xenia with a crowd of Cincinnati boosters Tuesday. He spoke in the shadow of a street banner proclaiming "Beg for Governor", erected by a group headed by that independent in political thought, Captain Charley Darlington.

Fred Anderson, who doesn't claim to be a politician at all, is interested in Cooper's candidacy because of a personal friendship. "Cooper will be the nominee", he says with confidence.

All seems to be quiet locally along the senatorial battle lines as none of the candidates appear to be doing anything to help themselves down here. That far-famed warrior, General Jacob S. Coxey, of Massillon, passed out his literature here recently and announced that he is still fighting for the same old principle of free money to which he has added a sideline of prohibition repeal.

Frank Johnson, Xenia barrister, is making a name for himself in the Republican nomination for congress from the seventh district away from Charley Brand, Urbana, the incumbent. Johnson is making political capital out of Brand's well-known opposition to Hoover, before the secretary of commerce was selected as the party's choice for president. Brand's speech in congress got him in "Dutch" and Johnson is not letting him forget about the unpleasant occasion.

In the meantime Harry E. Rice, Xenia, Democratic candidate for the same nomination, is having an easy time of it because he has no opposition. Rice unfolded a brand new plan for farm relief when he opened his campaign with an address at a dinner arranged for him by Ex-Congressman Matt Denver, at the General Denver Hotel, Wilmington, Thursday.

Interest of course, centers around the races for prosecutor, probate judge, county engineer and county commissioner. Will Howard, who is opposing Carl Marshall, the incumbent, in the race for the nomination for prosecutor, is making good campaign copy by emphasizing the fact that his opponent is seeking the nomination for the third term. He goes back farther than that, also, and declares that Marshall has held public office in Greene County for twenty years, without interruption, claiming that he himself has never held a public office and he thinks it his turn.

John W. Prugh, Xenia's genial mayor and Cal Wright, Cedarville, the incumbent, are battling for the nomination for probate judge in the primary, neither taking advantage of the privilege of the judicial ticket to wait until November to make their fight. Judge Wright, who was deputy under ex-Judge Marshall, is winding up his first term on the bench, and is anxious to add another to his record. Mayor Prugh has ambitions that run counter-wise. He is pointing to his career of public-spirited enterprise for Xenia and Greene County and to his record in city council, city commission, and as state superintendent of building and loans, to prove he is qualified for the probate judgeship. Judge Wright, who lived in Xenia for part of his term, has returned to his old home at Cedarville. He also is conducting a quiet campaign.

The attempt of John North, Xenia, former county commissioner, to win back his seat on that board, precipitated the fight for two vacancies to occur on the commission. J. Harve Lackey, of Ross Twp., and Bert Beam, of Spring Valley Twp., are the incumbents who must make the race for re-election this time. North, always a champion of the theory that Xenia should have representation on the board, is counting on heavy support from city precincts.

SHOW IS STOPPED

A "snake-charmer" show along the "midway" at the Greene County Fair was stopped Thursday by Tom Larkin, Columbus, representative of the state department of agriculture. Larkin said complaints had been received against operation of the show.

WILLIAM S. HOWARD

CANDIDATE FOR

Prosecuting Attorney

Mr. William S. Howard is a candidate for the office of PROSECUTING ATTORNEY of Greene County, Ohio, at the coming Republican Primary Election, August 14th, 1928.

It is the first time that Mr. Howard has ever been a candidate before the people for any office. Since his graduation from the Cincinnati Law School, he has been in the active practice of law in this city in all the State and Federal Courts.

Mr. Howard's opponent, Mr. Carl Marshall, the present incumbent of the office of Prosecuting Attorney, is seeking a third term, and this after having held office, successively as Deputy County Clerk, County Clerk, Probate Judge and is now serving his second term as Prosecuting Attorney, in all twenty years of continuous holding of public office.

If nominated and elected, Mr. Howard will give his best services to the people of Greene County.
